

St. Marys - 355
Zion ME Church
Rt. 235
Lexington Park, MD 20653

1881, 1956

Access: Public

The present Zion ME Church stands 35' from the west side of Rt. 235 and faces east. The church was built in 1956. Zion ME Church has gone through many changes in its 100yr. history. It was once a simple rural church (the only black Methodist church in the vicinity of Lexington Park). Over the years at least three churches have stood on this site. The area has mostly been a tobacco growing region until recent years when the Naval Air Test Station was located there.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The present structure was built around part of the old church in 1956. Zion ME Church stands 35' from the west side of Rt. 235, the building faces east. The church is constructed of cinder block. It measures 56' across the front facade and is 180' in depth. The building is gabled (East-West). There is a gabled entrance foyer that measures 18' across the front and is 8' in depth. Two concrete steps lead to the double doors (wooden) at the entrance. There are two windows (one on either side of the foyer) in the front facade. These windows have one clear-glass center pane and 12 colored lights that surround that pane. These windows are 3'. There are 4 2-over-2 clear-glass windows in the south side of the building and four more in the north side. An addition has been added on the west end of the building to serve as a Sunday School and Hall.
