

Capsule Summary
SM-399
Ark and Dove Inn
Mechanicsville
Private

circa 1880

The Ark and Dove Inn is a substantial structure with a wide setback from the road. The original form of the house is little changed except for the removal of the front porch and the addition of a picture window on the first floor of the main elevation. Despite its aluminum siding sheathing, the Ark and Dove Inn strongly contributes to the historic character of Mechanicsville.

This prominent two-and-a-half story structure was built in the late nineteenth century as the home of John T. Ballenger, a prominent Mechanicsville merchant. Only later, after Eugene Trice purchased the property in 1911, did this building become known as the Ark and Dove Inn. Trice's wife, Annie Robrecht Trice, managed the boarding house until 1942.

The Ark and Dove Inn is located on Old Route 5 in the village of Mechanicsville. This structure faces south with its principal gable oriented on an east/west axis.

The Ark and Dove Inn is a two-and-a-half story frame building sheathed with vinyl German siding. The roofline is finished with a boxed cornice and a wide frieze band. The roof is sheathed with asphalt shingles. Two interior brick chimneys flank the center hall of this house and pierce the roofline. The house is supported by a mixed brick and ironstone foundation.

The south (main) elevation has a central six-panel entrance door with two-light sidelights and a three-light transom window. This entrance is sheltered by a semi-circular portico supported by Tuscan columns. To the west of this entrance are two six-over-six sash windows with louvered shutters. To the east, the original sash windows have been replaced by one large picture window flanked by louvered shutters. Unlike the first floor, the fenestration pattern of the second floor remains unaltered. The central bay of the second floor consists of two smaller four-over-four sash windows with louvered shutters flanked on either side by two shuttered six-over-six sash windows. A miniature Palladian window lights the roof's central cross-gable. To the east of the main block is a smaller, two-story wing. Across the first floor of this wing is a shed-roof enclosure roofed with tar and pea-gravel. This roof is pierced by a metal stove stack and has a boxed cornice. This first floor is pierced by a four-light over three-panel door and a bank of three six-over-one sash windows. The second floor of this wing is lit by three six-over-six sash windows with louvered shutters. This wing is finished with a boxed cornice.

The west elevation is pierced by a modern door on the first floor which provides access between the house and a side porch. This square post porch is supported by a brick pier foundation and wraps around to the north elevation of the house. The second floor of the house is blind and the eave is lit by a miniature Palladian window.

The north elevation is lit on the first floor by a central four-panel entrance door flanked on the west by two shuttered six-over-six sash windows. To the west is a picture window comprised of strips of four and five panes of glass. Some of these look like salvaged transom windows or sidelights which have been recycled for use as a window here. A square post porch stretches across this first floor. The second floor is lit by five shuttered six-over-six sash windows. An exterior brick chimney pierces the eastern edge of the main block roof. To the east of the main block is a shorter, two-story addition. The first floor of the addition consists of an enclosed shed roof section lit by two six-over-six sash windows with louvered shutters and one four-pane

His store once stood on what is now the site of the Mechanicsville Volunteer Fire Department (SM-395). Trice's wife, Annie Robrecht Trice, managed the boarding house which hosted teachers employed at the nearby Mechanicsville Elementary School, traveling salesmen, and parents of Charlotte Hall Military Academy students. In the mid-1930s, the Inn provided meals to the public as well as to boarders. The Inn ceased operation shortly after Mrs. Trice died in 1942.

7.1 Description

casement window. The second floor is lit by two shuttered six-over-six sash windows.

The east elevation of the main block is mostly obscured by the slightly shorter two-story addition although the upper half story remains visible. This attic story is lit by a miniature Palladian window partially infilled with a louvered vent. This wing is finished with a boxed cornice and plain bargeboard, and is lit by one two-over-two sash window on the first floor. To the south and north sides of the smaller two-story wing extend one-story shed roof additions. The southern shed roof addition is lit by two six-over-one sash windows. The northern shed roof addition is lit by one six-over-six sash window and a modern entrance door sheltered by a gable roof portico.

The first floor interior consists of a center hall with an open stringer stair with decorative brackets, a turned newell post, turned balusters and a molded handrail. An elaborate plaster medallion, the site of a former light fixture, is located in the ceiling of this entrance hall. The southwest parlor has built-in alcove shelving which flanks the fireplace. The fireplace mantle in this room is not original to the house, but was found abandoned in a honeysuckle patch and then installed by previous owners. The northeast parlor retains its original mantle and alcove shelving. All second floor bedrooms have fireplaces with their original mantles intact. Four-panel doors are in place on this floor as well. The upper half story is divided into three rooms.

Three outbuildings stand on the property. There is a square cinderblock building with a pyramidal roof, a frame stable with a tin roof, and a weatherboard garage on the property.
