SM-94
De La Brooke Manor
Oraville vicinity
Private

Circa 1830-35

De La Brooke Manor is significant as a well-preserved masonry dwelling dating to the second quarter of the nineteenth century. Built around 1830 - 1835, the house is similar in form to Willow Glen (SM-198). The exterior of the side hall, double-pile plan house is typically Federal in style. Some interior woodwork is transitional, reflecting the early influence of the Greek Revival in St. Mary's County. The pristine setting of the house, bordered by the Patuxent River on the east, strongly contributes to the site's significance.

The current De La Brooke Manor house is the second dwelling that has stood on the property. This building was apparently destroyed by fire around 1830 - 1835. George Thomas replaced the house soon after it burned, building a much larger two-and-a-half story, brick structure on a site closer to the river.

Following George Thomas' death in 1857, the property passed to his wife Mary. Mary then devised the house to their son James Thomas. In 1886, De La Brooke was sold outside of the Thomas family. Mary T. Smith purchased the house and 750 acres of "Della Brooke Farm" which she proceeded to rent out until 1893. In that year, it was exchanged for three lots located on Druid Hill Avenue in Baltimore, Maryland. Ormond Hammond, a resident of Talbot County, became the new owner of "De-la-brook."

From the Hammond family, the property was transferred to Clarence W. Thomas. Thomas sold off a large portion of the farm prior to selling 104.77 acres to Leander McCormick-Goodhart in 1927. The house has been sensitively maintained by the McCormick-Goodhart family who continue to own it today.

De La Brooke Manor is located at the end of an unpaved, tree-lined drive on the north side of Delabrooke Road near Oraville in St. Mary's County, Maryland. A grassy lawn and cultivated fields extend to the north, west, and south of the house. The Patuxent River is located on the east side of the dwelling. Here, the river bank is eroding. A sea wall has been erected to protect the house from the encroachment of the river. A pier extends from the sea wall out into the river. There are no original outbuildings located near the house. The house faces west with the principal gable oriented on a north/south axis.

Built around 1830, De La Brooke Manor is composed of a two-story, 5/1 bond brick main block and a slightly shorter southern two-story wing. Originally, the exterior of the house was covered with stucco scored to imitate ashlar masonry. The roof of the house is sheathed with slate. Both the north and south elevations of the main block are finished with a pair of bridged chimneys. A frame, two-story bathroom addition is located on the east side of the house.

The west (main) elevation is pierced by a six-panel entrance door with a centre bead and a metal box lock. The door has paneled reveals. Surmounting the door is a rectangular, leaded-glass fanlight. This entry is sheltered by a hipped-roof portico supported by square posts and roofed with wood shingles. South of the entry are two six-over-six sash windows with beaded surrounds and louvered shutters that light the first floor of the house. Below these windows are two shuttered four-light windows that light the basement. Three six-over-six sash windows with beaded surrounds and louvered shutters light the second floor of the house. The roof is pierced by gable roof dormers lit with six-over-six sash windows. These windows are flanked by fluted pilasters. The south wing is pierced on the first floor by a central six-panel door with a four-light transom window. The entry is sheltered by a hipped-roof portico supported by square posts. Flanking the door on either side are six-over-six sash windows with louvered shutters. The second floor is pierced by three shuttered six-over-six sash windows. The roofline of both the main block and this wing is finished with a corbeled brick cornice.

The south elevation of the main block is largely obscured by the south wing. Two six-over-six sash windows pierce the second floor of the main block on either side of the wing. The eave is pierced by two four-over-four sash windows. The south gable end of the wing is blind. An interior brick chimney pierces the roof ridge line.

The east elevation of the south wing is pierced by a central six-panel door surmounted by a four-light transom. One shuttered six-over-six sash window pierces

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

De La Brooke Manor is significant as a well-preserved masonry dwelling dating to the second quarter of the nineteenth century. Built around 1830 - 1835, the house is similar in form to Willow Glen (SM-198). The exterior of the side hall, double-pile plan house is typically Federal in style. Some interior woodwork is transitional, reflecting the early influence of the Greek Revival in St. Mary's County. The pristine setting of the house, bordered by the Patuxent River on the east, strongly contributes to the site's significance.

The current De La Brooke Manor house is the second dwelling that has stood on the property. According to an article published in the November 1953 issue of the Chronicles, the first house located on the property stood "...about a mile from the River and about 50 yards north of the road from De La Brook to the Three Notched Road. It was brick, 30' by 40,' 1 1/2 stories high with a steep roof and dormer windows." This building was apparently destroyed by fire around 1830 - 1835. George Thomas replaced the house soon after it burned, building a much larger two-and-a-half story, brick structure on a site closer to the river.

Following George Thomas' death in 1857, the property passed to his wife Mary. Mary then devised the house to their son James Thomas. In 1886, De La Brooke was sold outside of the Thomas family. Mary T. Smith purchased the house and 750 acres of "Della Brooke Farm" which she proceeded to rent out until 1893. In that year, it was exchanged for three lots located on Druid Hill Avenue in Baltimore, Maryland. Ormond Hammond, a resident of Talbot County, became the new owner of "De-la-brook."

From the Hammond family, the property was transferred to Clarence W. Thomas. Thomas sold off a large portion of the farm prior to selling 104.77 acres to Leander McCormick-Goodhart in 1927. An early nineteenth-century tobacco barn (SM-411), formerly part of the De La Brooke tract, remains standing on a parcel located west of the house and now owned by SMECO. The house has been sensitively maintained by the McCormick-Goodhart family who continue to own it today.

7.1 Description

the first floor. The entry is sheltered by a frame portico supported by Doric columns. The second floor of the wing is pierced by two six-over-six sash windows. A two-story, shed roof, frame wing with a concrete foundation projects from the east wall of the south wing. This addition is pierced on the first and second floors by one six-over-six sash window. A circular window also pierces the second floor. A screened, hipped-roof porch extends across the full width of the main block first floor. The porch has a wood floor and a wainscoted ceiling. The roof is supported by Doric columns. The first floor is pierced by a six-panel door surmounted by a rectangular, leaded-glass transom window. Two shuttered six-over-six sash windows light the first floor. The second floor is pierced by three shuttered six-over-six sash windows. Two gable roof dormers, like those on the west side of the house, pierce the east roof slope.

The north elevation is pierced on the first and second floors by two six-over-six sash windows. Below these window openings, two four-light windows pierce the foundation of the house, lighting the basement. The eave is pierced by two four-over-four sash windows.

The interior of the main block consists of a side hall, double pile plan. The door and window surrounds are molded and finished with bulls-eye corner blocks. The hall cornice features a reverse ogee and a bottom dentil course. The hall is fitted with an open string stair that rises from east to west against the north wall. The waist of the stair is finished with recessed panels. The newel post is a gracefully turned, slender post and the balusters are square. Underneath the stair, a six-panel door opens to provide access to the basement. Six-panel doors with rectangular-paneled reveals open to the east and west parlors. These rooms were originally separated by large, folding double doors. Both rooms feature fireplaces located against the south wall. The west mantel is a marble replacement of the original frame surround. The east mantel consists of columns that flank the firebox and support a plain frieze with a reeded center block. Slate now covers the original marble hearth. From the east parlor, a door opens to the south wing.

The basement consists of a side hall with a small room at either end, and two larger rooms located beneath the east and west first floor parlors. The larger east room is fitted with a firebox on the south wall surrounded by a plain Greek Revival style mantel. The west room is also fitted with a small fireplace against the south wall. The ceiling is covered with pressed metal. The only exposed framing members are located in the small room located off of the west end of the hall. Here, the exposed ceiling joists are hewn and pit sawn.

The second floor of the main block consists of four bedrooms. As in the basement, small rooms are located at both the east and west ends of the stair hall. Both bedrooms are fitted with fireplaces surrounded by Greek Revival style mantels.

7.2 Description

The master bedroom is located above the east parlor. The firebox located here has a beaded surround. The mantel consists of fluted pilasters that support a plain frieze. Below the mantel shelf is a complex Greek Revival bed molding. Above the west parlor is a hallway that leads to the second floor of the south wing. The fourth bedroom, fitted with a mantel similar to that of the master bedroom, opens off of this hall.

The first floor of the south wing consists of a kitchen and a pantry with a large hearth on the south wall. This fireplace measures four feet in height by six feet six inches in width. The door and window surrounds in the kitchen are plain with an interior bead. A dogleg stair provides access to the second floor of the south wing. One bedroom is located here.

Oraville

Private

This Federal house, with the usual end hall and double parlor floor plan, replaced the original Dela Brooke manor house which was destroyed in 1835. The present house is of stucco over brick, is two stories in height and three bays in length, and has pairs of bridged chimney stacks at each end. At one end is a two-story brick wing probably of later date.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

De La Brooke Manor is the site of a 17th C. ~~manor~~ house of the same name. Robert Brooke, born in London in 1602, surveyed the site in 1650, but died before the house was completed. The Brooke was President of the Provincial Council and acting Governor of Md. in 1652, but apparently he died before De La Brooke was completed. The Council is mentioned as having met at De La Brooke in 1662. It was destroyed in 1835, ~~and~~ after which the present De La Brooke was built.
