Easton, Maryland 21601

T-292
1890-1893

This little one and one-half story frame house and its companion carriage house, stand on Goldsborough Street, in a neighborhood of modest mid-to-late nineteenth century buildings. Covered by shingled mansard roofs, these fanciful structures represent a Victorian interpretation of French Renaissance architecture.

The carriage house is one of the most elaborate in the town, and is a charming double of the main house.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This little dwelling and its carriage house stand on the north side of Goldsborough Street near the railroad tracks. This is one of an interesting group of modest dwellings constructed on the four hundred block of this street in the second half of the nineteenth century. The most distinctive feature of these companion buildings are their mansard roofs.

The house is three by three bays with a wide front porch. One and one-half stories in height it is raised on a high brick basement.

The roof is covered with asbestos shingles. Very shallow round arch dormers are used between bays. Its two over two sashes are framed with flat frames. Eaves are edged with wide molded fascia and supported by scroll-type brackets used in pairs.

First floor windows have two over two sashes held in frames trimmed with back bond moldings. The main entrance has an overlight and sidelights. The door has four panels, the upper being round-headed; panels are edged with deep bolection moldings.

The porch has a shallow central false gable and round columns. The western portion of the porch has been enclosed. The double flight of front brick steps, an addition, is out of scale with the small dwelling. Dormers and window openings on the sides of the house are similiarly detailed. There is a two story wing at the rear.

Original siding has been covered with grey asbestos shingles. The building is now used as apartments.

The carriage house has a mansard roof covered with decorative wooden shingles. It is a one and one-half story building with unoccupied living quarters on the upper floor. Shallow dormers, two in each facade, have shallow 'A' roofs and segmental arch windows with two over two sashes.

The roof eaves are treated with wide molded fascia and paired scroll-type brackets. A cupula sets astride the roof. It has louvers in round arch openings on the sides. Three wide carriage doors provide access on the west facade. The structure is covered with German ship-lap siding.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

These amusing structures represent a Victorian interpretation of French Renaissance architecture. The mansard roof and round arch windows are both appropriate to dwellings of this scale and are used here with considerable success and imagination. The carriage house is one of the most elaborate in the town, reflecting the importance given to outbuildings during this period. In this case it is a charming double of the main house.

Unfortunately the carriage house has been neglected and in all likelihood cannot be economically restored.
