THE ROBERT H. SEYMOUR HOUSE IS ONE OF THE FEW STORY-AND-A-HALF, TWO ROOM HOUSES THAT HAS NOT BEEN CHANGED SIGNIFICANTLY. BUILT C. 1860 IT IS TYPICAL OF THE TYPE OF PERIOD HOUSES THAT LINE GRACE STREET. IT IS SUPPORTED BY A MINIMAL BRICK FOUNDATION AND IN SOME AREAS THE SILL RESTS ON THE GROUND. THIS IS WHERE MOST OF THE DETERIORATION IS LOCATED.

THERE ARE TWO, ONE STORY ADDITIONS, ONE WHICH CONTAINS A BEDROOM AND BATH AND THE OTHER, THE KITCHEN. THE EXTERIOR SIDING MATERIAL CONSISTS OF WOOD CLAPBOARD. THE INTERIOR OF THE HOUSE HAS BEEN MODIFIED WITH AN ENLARGED OPENING BETWEEN THE TWO FIRST FLOOR ROOMS. THE FRONT ROOM CONTAINS THE HEARTH WHICH IS FRAMED BY A SIMPLE MID NINETEENTH-CENTURY MANTEL.

5. Description of physical appearance:

The Robert S. Seymour House is a one and one-half story, 900 square foot frame structure, centrally located in St. Michaels Historic District (National Register District). The siding is traditional clapboard later sheathed with asbestos shingles. The structure faces south with fore and aft dormers having four over four sash windows. The roofing material is wooden shake covered later by asphalt shingles. Originally a two room house, a shed roof was added to the east side to provide for an interior bath and a bedroom. A kitchen wing was added to the North side of the house while the West side is singularly marked by an exterior chimney. The front room was divided by built-in book cases and shelving (1920-30). Six over six windows are on either side of the center entranceway.

Date of Construction: 1860 Source of Date: Survey No. T-592 (Paul Touart)

Date(s) of Alteration(s): 1920-30 (est.)

Has building been moved? yes no. If so, when? _____

6. Statement of significance:

The Robert S. Seymour House is one of the few remaining waterman/boat yard worker residences in St. Michaels. It is a very modest, two room abode (with subsequent bedroom and kitchen additions) constructed of local materials. The original section of the house is constructed of hewn timbers using mortise and tenon joinery. The house blends well with other Grace Street residences with its limited set-back alignment and simple exterior lines. Paul Touart, Historical Architect, estimates construction took place in the third quarter, nineteenth century.

c. 1860

The Robert H. Seymour house, standing at 105 Grace Street, is one of the few story-and-a-half two-room plan houses that has not been enlarged significantly by modern additions. The simple exterior finishes are also found inside with plain third quarter of the nineteenth-century woodwork. The house stands next to another story-and-a-half frame house and near third and fourth quarter of the nineteenth-century structures. With its relatively unaltered appearance, the modest frame house contributes to the continuous line of period houses that mark Grace Street.

Robert H. Seymour is the most likely builder of this house after he assumed a thirty-year lease on the property from George H. Hopkins in 1860. Seventeen years later, a deed for the same property was executed between six Harrington family heirs and Hopkins for $100. Seymour remained on the site until his death, and Seymour's heirs transferred ownership of the house and lot to Thomas J. Sears in 1895. Slightly less than a dozen owners have held title to the small house since the early twentieth century.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Robert H. Seymour house is located at 105 Grace Street in the western residential district in the center of St. Michaels, Talbot County, Maryland. The story-and-a-half frame house faces south with the gable oriented on an east/west axis.

Probably built during the third quarter of the nineteenth century, the two-room plan house is supported by a minimal brick foundation and sheathed with asbestos shingles. The steeply pitched asphalt shingle roof is finished with a boxed cornice and flush gable ends. Attached to the back is a single story kitchen addition and to the east a shed roofed bedroom and bathroom wing.

The south (main) elevation is a three-bay facade with a center entrance and flanking six-over-six sash windows. The door is a modern replacement with triangular panels below the lock rail and glazing above. Lighting the loft is a small gabled dormer filled with a four-over-four sash window.

Partially covering the east gable end is the single-story shed roofed addition, and lighting the loft is a four-over-four sash window. The west gable end is marked by an exterior brick chimney with a wide base, a corbelled shoulder, and a narrow stack.

The north side of the house is largely covered by a single-story kitchen wing.

The interior of the house has been modified with an enlarged opening between the two first floor rooms. The front room contains the hearth which is framed by a simple mid nineteenth-century mantel. The surround has a beaded inside corner and the frieze is plain. A thick shelf is nailed on top of the frieze. Fixed in the northwest corner is a tight winder stair without a door or handrail. The second floor is simply finished without unusual details. A wide pine floor remains fastened with cut nails. Access into the roof structure revealed a flat false plate, hewn rafters and cut-nail construction.

HISTORY AND SUPPORT

Robert H. Seymour is the most likely builder of this Grace Street house after he assumed a thirty-year lease on the property from George H. Hopkins in 1860 (69/165). Seventeen years later, a deed for the same property was executed between six Harrington family heirs and Hopkins for $100 (82/258). Seymour remained on the site until his death, and Seymour's heirs transferred ownership of the house and lot to Thomas J. Sears in 1895 (125/40.) Slightly less than a dozen owners have held title to the small house since the early twentieth century.
