Old Schoolhouse Building
St. Michaels
private

c. 1890 and later

By tradition the house at 408 St. Mary's Square is believed to be part of the building once used by the St. Michaels Female Seminary. This tradition, however, has not been fully substantiated. It is apparent that this house, consisting of two different structures, has been moved at least once. The buildings formerly associated with the St. Michaels High School, located across the street during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, were moved or torn down at different times.

The first time a structure appears on this part of "Lot 32," the site of the house, is on the 1901 Sanborn Insurance map. By contrast, the 1891 maps shows the lot vacant, but a similarly sized structure stands behind the High School on the same map, but it was moved, torn down or burned by 1901. If this house and the building that stood behind the high school are the same structure, than it may serve as the basis for the long-standing tradition that this building once served as a school. More factual evidence has not surfaced.

The old schoolhouse building is an unusual tupe of gable front structure not normally associated with the different types of dwellings in St. Michaels.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The old schoolhouse building stands at 408 St. Mary's Square in the center of St. Michaels, Talbot County, Maryland. The two-story, two-bay frame house faces east with the gable roof oriented on an east/west axis.

Evidently dating, at least in part, to the late nineteenth century, the two-story stepped frame house is supported by a concrete foundation and is sheathed with a uniform layer of wood shingles. The medium pitched gable roof is covered with asphalt shingles. According to local builder, Victor MacSorley, the house is composed of two separate buildings that were joined to make a single dwelling.

The east (main) elevation is an asymmetrical two-bay facade with a side entrance and a flanking six-over-six sash window. The replacement front door is topped by a three-light transom, and a gabled hood shelters the doorway. The second floor is lighted by a pair of evenly spaced six-over-six sash windows. Each of the window openings is hung with louvered shutters. The gable end is flush, and it is trimmed with a plain bargeboard.

Rising against the south side of the front block is a modern, exterior brick chimney, while the north side is defined by a six-over-six sash window on each floor.

The slightly shorter rear section is finished in a similar fashion with the addition of smaller, modern windows.

The interior was not seen.

By tradition the house at 408 St. Mary's Square is believed to be part of the building once used by the St. Michaels Female Seminary. This tradition has not been entirely substantiated. It is apparent that this house, consisting of two different structures, has been moved at least once. The buildings formerly associated with the St. Michaels High School, located across the street during the fourth quarter of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, were moved or torn down at different times.

The first time a structure appears on this part of "Lot 32" is on the 1901 Sanborn Insurance Map. By contrast, the 1891 map shows the lot vacant, but a similarly sized structure stands behind the High School on the same map, but it was moved, torn down or burned by 1901. This may serve as the basis of the long-standing tradition that this house was once a school, but more factual evidence has not surfaced.

The old schoolhouse building is an unusual type of gable front structure, and offers an interesting contrast to the more standard mid to late nineteenth-century houses that face St. Mary's Square.

FROM: James Braddock PRICE: p40 cm

TO: William Hambleton, Gent.

NOTES This deed was recorded in 1801 - 21 years after the sale was made!

As may be seen from the mortgage recorded by Cornelius Dorgan in 1799 (28/351) the lot must have been sold to John Merchant by 1799.

No transactions involving lot number 32 and William Hambleton or John Merchant have been found. William Hambleton died 1806 and John Merchant in

The dimensions of this lot as given in the Braddock deed are 60 x 120 feet.

This and the other lots on the west side of St. Mary's Square (32-35) are shown as 100-foot-deep lots on the plat of the town and are so-listed in the survey of 1804-1806. The 1804 survey was supposed to give precedence to Braddock's plan for the town, which had been lost by 1804!

There is a tradition that part of the St. Michaels Female Seminary was moved to this lot from lot 40 or 41, across the Square. However, the lot is vacant on both the 1877 Atlas map of St. Michaels and the 1891 Sanborn map. There is a structure shown on the "school" lot (#40) in 1877 but it disappears by 1891, and lot 32 is still vacant! Lot 32 definitely shows a dwelling on the 1901 Sanborn. The 1891 Sanborn shows a building behind and to the right of the High School which is gone by 1901 and this could be the one on lot 32.

In 1873, bids were asked to remodel that old M. E. Church in St. Michaels for school purposes. The contract was awarded Blades and Dyott. This remodeled building was occupied in March 1874 by the high school and the grammar school. It was called the Consolidated High School of St. Michaels. The old building that was vacated had been formerly used by the St. Michaels Female Seminary. It was sold for $50 and moved down San Domingo Creek on a barge to be added to the brick dwelling on Oremton Farm.

In 1875, a new one-room schoolhouse was built for the Chapel District by Thomas J. Eaton at the cost of $625. That same year, Julius G. Miller resigned as Principal of Easton High School. Since no suitable successor could be found, Prof. Alexander Chaplain, the school examiner, served as principal ex officio, with T. L. Pattison as his assistant.

In 1886, rules were adopted for the schools. School opened at 9 a.m. and closed at noon with an hour for lunch. The afternoon session was from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Recesses must last for only ten minutes, and pupils would march back to their classrooms. Morning and afternoon exercises should have appropriate readings, music and singing.

In 1887, Wm. V. Hardcastle was principal of Trappe High School. He was followed by Daniel Melvin Long.

In March 1889, the School Examiner sent a circular letter to all teachers giving plans for observing Arbor Day. Literary exercises would be followed by the planting of trees. Later that year, in August, the new building for the St. Michaels schools was inspected by the County School Commissioners and Prof. Alexander Chaplain, accompanied by Prof. M.A. Newell, State Superintendent of Public Schools, and Peter A. Witmer, a member of the State Board of Education. The cost of this new brick building on Chestnut Street was $7777.37.

In September of that year, the total enrollment of the public schools of Talbot County totaled 4,069 pupils.
