

ABSTRACT

49-53 West Washington Street

1882

Hagerstown

Washington County

This four stories high, brick, commercial structure was erected in 1882 for William Updegraff (1831-19). The angular Eastlakinian features and the carved brickwork of the facade (north side) of the building were popular in Hagerstown in the 1880s, the decade in which this building was erected. Although the first floor has been extensively remodeled in recent years, the upper three stories of the facade appear to remain intact.

This building and the one which abuts it on the east side, 43-47 West Washington Street, are closely associated with the Updegraff family. George Updegraff (1798-18), a hatter and father of the above mentioned William, purchased both properties in 1853. William Updegraff acquired the land in 1867 and transferred it to his sons George and Edward in 1903. The present owners purchased the buildings from George and Edward Updegraff in 1931.

In the years following the Civil War, the Updegraffs changed from making hats to manufacturing gloves for which they apparently gained some note. The family interests were also expanded to include a clothing store which was housed in this building at 49-53 West Washington Street. On the east wall of the building is a legible but faded sign advertising the Updegraff firm as "clothiers, hatters, and furnishers."

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
The building known as 49-53 West Washington Street in Hagerstown, Washington County, stands on the south side of the street near the center of the block formed by Public Square and Summit Avenue. The building is an 1882 Eastlavian influenced, urban commercial structure which is four stories high and sits tightly in row with the neighboring buildings and sidewalk. Constructed of brick, the building has a rectangular facade (north side) divided into three sections and is terminated with a gently sloping shed roof and a bracketed cornice of moderate projection. The building appears to be structurally sound and the upper three stories of the facade are fairly original in condition. The ground floor of the facade has two circa 1970s shop fronts. The character of the second, third, and fourth floors of the facade (north side) is derived from the horizontal arrangement of the tall, slender windows grouped between piers rising from the top of the first floor and ending at the cornice. The window groupings consist of, from east to west, two, three, and three. The four piers are projected and have ornamental brickwork corresponding to the decorated spandrels of the bays. The windows all have double-hung, wooden sashes with four-over-four lights and moderately projecting lintels. The cornice has wide brackets with drops and pediments above the piers. The facade is painted. An item of interest and historical significance is the painted sign for the Updegraff firm on the east wall.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This four stories high, brick, commercial structure was erected in 1882 for William Updegraff (1831-19) (Williams, Vol. II, pp. 638-641). The angular Eastlavian features and the carved brickwork of the facade (north side) of the building were popular in Hagerstown in the 1880s, the decade in which this building was erected. Although the first floor has been extensively remodeled in recent years, the upper three stories of the facade appear to remain intact.

This building and the one which abuts it on the east side, 43-47 West Washington Street, are closely associated with the Updegraff family. George Updegraff (1798-18), a hatter and father of the above mentioned William, purchased both properties in 1853 (Deed Book I.N. No. 7, p. 514). William Updegraff acquired the land in 1867 (Deed Book L.B.N. No. 2, p. 117) and transferred it to his sons George and Edward in 1903 (Deed Book 117, p. 415). The present owners purchased the buildings from George and Edward Updegraff in 1931.

In the years following the Civil War, the Updegraffs changed from making hats to manufacturing gloves for which they apparently gained some note (Williams, Vol. I, p. 371). The family interests were also expanded to include a clothing store which was housed in this building at 49-53 West Washington Street. On the east wall of the building is a legible but faded sign advertising the Updegraff firm as "clothiers, hatters, and furnishers."

The 1903 deed covering the transference of title from William Updegraff to his sons George and Edward lists a stone building as occupying this site. As noted above, the stylistic and design features indicate a circa 1880s date for construction. The stone reference in the 1903 deed may be a clerical error or, perhaps, an earlier structure is included with the present building.

For an interesting item of comparison, this building is similar in design to the Humrichouse Building illustrated in the 1887 Hagerstown, Maryland Illustrated (p. 15). The Humrichouse Building stood on West Washington Street but was apparently demolished quite some time ago. The major differences between the buildings appear to be the window arrangement (3-4-3 in the Humrichouse Building).
