Description

This is a two story L-shaped frame house with Queen Anne influences. The intersecting gables are covered with galvanized metal. It is a two bay structure with one over one and multiple panes over one windows. There are side porches, a front semi-hexagonal projecting bay and Palladian windows in the gables. The exterior is covered with German siding and the house rests on a rubble stone foundation. It represents residential construction during Hancock's major growth phase of the early 20th century.
