Description

This is a two story L-shaped frame house with intersecting gables covered with a metal standing seam roof. It is a four bay structure with one over one windows with crenelated trim. There is a front wrap-around porch. The house is covered wood bevel siding. There is also a garage on the property. This house appears on the 1908 Sanborn map, and reflects Hancock's residential construction boom of the early 20th century. It also is significant for it's original character defining details.
