Description

This is a two story frame house with a gable roof covered with metal standing seam. It is a three bay structure with two over two windows. The exterior has been covered with asbestos siding and the foundation is stone. Across the front and north side of the house are porches. There is a garage and a small frame storage shed type of outbuilding on the property. It represents Hancock's conservatively designed architecture of it's major growth period in the early 20th century.
