DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This structure is located just west of Indian Lane at its junction with the Cavetown Pike, Maryland Route 64 in Washington County. It is situated on a rise above the east bank of the Antietam creek and faces east.

The building is a one-story, two-bay stone structure constructed of coursed local limestone. The original use of the building has not been determined. With most interior work appearing relatively recent, few clues to its original appearance remain.

All openings have arched heads. The windows and doors have modern frames which are joined with nails. No sashes remain in the windows.

Sheet metal covers a roofing structure of modern rafters secured with nails. There is no chimney although patched roofing inside the south gable suggests that a flue was present.

The structure which displays no finishing, plastering or decorative woodwork at its interior consists of one room. It is in good condition and is located on a three-acre tract.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The area of significance of this structure is its architecture. Although all that appears to remain of the original building are four stone walls, it is considered locally as a very old structure. It has been described as a shop, and it should be noted that a mill was located nearby on the west bank of the Antietam.

Arched window heads have been associated with pre-1780 stone structures in Washington County. The presence of such windows and doors on this building could suggest an 18th century building date.
