DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This house is located at 516 Antietam Drive, Hagerstown, Washington County, Maryland, in an area known as Security or Fiddlersburg. It is situated on the east side of Antietam Drive just north of the Western Maryland railroad, with its gable end facing west.

The structure is a two-bay, one-and-a-half story log dwelling sheathed with white aluminum siding. Shed roofed additions are attached to the east gable wall and the east end of the north elevation.

The walls are set on very low foundations which appear to have been reinforced with concrete. The wall construction is concealed beneath the siding, but the owner has stated that the house is built of logs. The great thickness of the walls at the window and door openings would tend to support this claim.

The windows are modern in appearance with single-pane aluminum double-hung sashes. They are small in size in relation to the wall area. The main entrance is now located in the addition.

The roof is covered with grey asphalt shingles and terminates at the gables with a narrow barge board set directly against the end walls. A small modern flue rises from the interior of the house near the center of the ridge.

The house is in excellent condition and stands on a tract containing .46 acre.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The area of significance of this house is its architecture. Although its original appearance cannot be observed, it is an excellent example of a log dwelling probably dating from after 1850. Thus, it reflects the persistence of an early vernacular building method well into the 19th century. According to local historians, this house and several others similar to it were built as company-owned houses by the paper mill which operated at Security from about 1865 to 1929.

The village of Security is also known as Bissel and Fiddlersburg, a name which is said to have originated from a number of older men who lived in the village during the late 19th century and who played their fiddles on summer evenings.

Several dated examples of Washington County's 18th century stone dwellings are located in Security.
