DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
This log house is located on the south side of Durbury Road at its intersection with the Leitersburg-Smithsburg Road in Washington County, Maryland. It is situated on level ground with its main entrance facing north. The structure is a two part log dwelling, one and a half stories in height and four bays long. A vertical seam near the center of the north and south elevations marks the jointure of the two sections. The walls are constructed of large hewn logs joined at the corners with V notching. There is evidence that at one time many of the logs were covered with whitewash. Much of the chinking has been replaced with concrete. However, early mortar that does remain is composed of clay and lime. Some portions of the walls are covered with composition siding. Windows are spaced at random in the walls. They are framed with narrow boards, some with six over six pane double hung sashes. A shed roofed dormer extends from the south slope of the roof over the jointure of the two sections. The main entrance is in the west bay of the north elevation and is framed similarly to the windows. Another entrance, obscured by a shed extension, is located in the east bay of the south elevation. The roof is covered with sheet metal and displays no finishing work at the eaves. A small brick flue extends from the south slope of the roof, near the center of the west section of the structure. No fireplaces were observed. The structure is in deteriorated condition. It is located on a tract containing 2.19 acres. Situated nearby is a modern brick dwelling.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE
The area of significance of this structure is its architecture. Constructed of log, it is representative of a major architectural group in Washington County as well as the Cumberland and Shenandoah Valleys. Log was used extensively as a building material in this area from the earliest days of settlement to well into the nineteenth century. Many log structures in Washington County remain in use today, sheathed with various forms of siding or bricks. Although this house is undated it offers an example of an early building type in Washington County.
