19th Century

The most significant structure in this farm complex is the large brick end bank barn built in 1862 by Lewis Schindel. The end walls of the structure with their decorative open work ventilators are an important variant among barn types in the Cumberland Valley. Most decorated brick end barns in Washington County date from the middle third of the 19th century. This type of construction is found extensively in southern Pennsylvania, northern Maryland, northern Virginia and West Virginia, areas where people of German descent settled in great numbers.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This farm complex is located west of Hopewell Road just north of its junction with Halfway Boulevard, southwest of Hagerstown in Washington County, Maryland. The farm is now used by a large construction firm, the Blake Company for offices and storage of equipment. The farm buildings on the property are situated on a slight slope and face east.

The house is a two story, three bay building apparently of log construction and sheathed with German siding. It is painted white with dark green trim. A one story porch supported by square wooden posts with decorative cut brackets extends along most of the front elevation. A plain one story porch is present at the rear elevation.

Windows have applied turn-of-the-century period trim surrounding two over two pane double hung sashes. Entrances are located in the first and second bays from the north end of the front elevation.

The roof is covered with sheet metal and extends beyond the end walls of the house. Brick chimneys are located inside each gable end.

The house lot is enclosed with a white picket fence.

Just north of the house is a large brick end bank barn. Set in the south gable of the barn is a date stone inscribed with the name L. Schindel and the year 1862. The end wall have geometric open work triangular or diamond shaped figures for ventilators. The overhanging forebay is of frame construction. Window and door frames are joined with wooden pegs. The barnyard is enclosed with a stone wall.

Just east of the barn is a modern building associated with the construction company.

The farm structures appear to be in fair to good condition. The tract on which they are located contains 78.496 acres and is part of the land grant, "Amendment on the Resurvey of Hager's Delight."

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The most significant structure in this farm complex is the large brick end bank barn built in 1862 by Lewis Schindel. The end walls of the structure with their decorative open work ventilators are an important variant among barn types in the Cumberland Valley. Most decorated brick end barns in Washington County date from the middle third of the 19th century. This type of construction is found extensively in southern Pennsylvania, northern Maryland, northern Virginia and West Virginia, areas where people of German descent settled in great numbers.

In 1855, Samuel and Julian Schindel sold a farm containing 206 1/2 acres of which this property is a part to Lewis Schindel. (IN10/466). The portion of the farm included in this tract descended through the Schindel family until 1924, when Newton L. and Hannah Schindel sold it to Daniel S. and Emma J. Blenard. (100/487, 168/570). It was purchased by the present owner in 1967 (455/309). An extensive biography of the Schindel family has been published in T.J.C. Williams, History of Washington County.
