DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This house is located on the west side of the Sharpsburg Pike, just south of Rench Road, south of Hagerstown in Washington County, Maryland. It faces east. It is a two story, four bay brick dwelling with a hexagonal projecting tower at its southeast corner.

Bricks forming the walls are laid in common bond with header rows spaced at intervals between seven courses of stretchers. Windows are trimmed with segmenatal arches of upright bricks at their tops. One story porches resting on brick piers are located along the south and east elevations and are supported by doric type pillars. Wooden lattice work spans the area between the piers.

Windows are large with single pane double hung sashes. Hinge pins remain in the window frames except for those in the tower which are narrower than the other windows. A door is located in the third bay from the north end of the front elevation. Another is found in the center bay of the south wall. Both are framed similarly to the windows with transoms present above the doors. Other entrances are located at the rear of the house.

The house has a hipped roof of slate laid in an imbricated pattern. Imbricating is also used on the roof of the tower which terminates with a metal finial. Decorative metal caps mark the peaks of the main roof also.

A chimney is located inside the south wall. A small frame barn and outbuildings are located south of the house. The property contains 11.54 acres. The house would appear to date from the turn of the century or the early 20th century.
