Dayhoff Barn
Hagerstown Vicinity
Private

Late 19th Century

The Dayhoff Barn is significant because it is a well-preserved nineteenth century bank barn exemplifying one of the most important structures of the agricultural economy of the Hagerstown area. It is also a visual focal point of the area because of its location at the edge of the road and the contrast between its smooth frame exterior and the surrounding residential buildings.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Dayhoff Barn is a frame bank barn on a stone foundation dating from the mid to late nineteenth century and located on the east side of Antietam Drive at the southern edge of the village of Fiddlersburg, about one mile northeast of Hagerstown.

The barn has a board and batten exterior and shed roofed extensions on the north and south ends. The roof is gabled and covered in standing seam metal sheets. In the center of the west elevation are double doors. The east elevation has several openings in the stone lower story, and a fence surrounding the rear yard.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Dayhoff Barn is significant for two reasons: 1) it is a well-preserved nineteenth century bank barn and exemplifies one of the most important structures of an agricultural economy such as that of the Hagerstown area; 2) it is a visual focal point of the immediate surrounding area.

The Dayhoff Barn may be one of two buildings belonging to "S. Hoover" shown on Lake, Griffing and Stevenson's 1877 Map of Washington County.

Its smooth, unbroken exterior is a visual contrast to the surrounding residential buildings. Its siting at the edge of the road contributes to its pivotal position in the area. In addition, its function is immediately apparent and underscores the original basis of the local economy.
