Description:

This frame Queen Anne style house is located on the northeast corner of Poplar and Antietam Streets. The second story is covered with asbestos shingles and the first story is German sided. A character-defining feature is the forward projecting semi-hexagonal bay beneath a steeply pitched gable. The house is a three bay structure with a central entrance. Windows have single pane sash and there is a wraparound porch supported by round columns. It has a turned balustrade.

Apparently there was an earlier house on this site. The 1877 Atlas map shows a house located against the street rather than set back as this house is. It was the property of J. Flora.
