This property contains a two story L-shaped frame house side gabled, four bays wide with a central entrance. It is covered with aluminum siding. The extension to the rear has a double porch along its south wall which has been partially enclosed. Some windows have two over two pane sash which appear to be original, while others have single pane sash. Distinctive is the facade with the four bay second level and a central entrance. On either side of the entrance are one-story semi-hexagonal projecting bays which may have originally been associated with an across the front porch, since a common roof deck now spans them both. Although extensively altered on the surface, this house represents Maugansville's main growth phase which occurred in the early 20th century. Date attribution is based on remaining exterior features from the period of construction such as the two-over two-windows and the standing seam roof and the overall form and appearance of the house.
