Approximate date Ca. 1920s

This foursquare style house is constructed entirely from cast stone or rock faced concrete block. Typically, for the style, the house is nearly square in shape, with a hipped roof, dormers and a wraparound porch. It has three bays at the front elevation with a central entrance. It is larger than the other foursquare houses in this block and is the only cast stone block one in the village. Windows have single pane sash and the dormers have shed roofs with double windows. The front entrance includes the door and a transom. The porch extends across the front and the south side of the house. The south portion has, however, been infilled. The house is situated on a triangular lot defined by the railroad and Village Mill Drive. Most of the area south of the house has been covered with macadam. According to local informants, a bank was once located on the property immediately south of this which may have been part of this lot. Built in the 1920s, as dated by its foursquare styling and the use of cast stone, this house reflects Maugansville's major growth period. It is distinctive as the village's only cast stone dwelling, although many others utilize the material for foundations and trim.
