Approximate date Ca. 1890-1910

This Germanic traditional house appears to date from the late 19th or early 20th century. It is a two story, four bay frame house with two center front doors, a facade arrangement frequently seen in areas inhabited by Pennsylvania Germans. This house is covered with aluminum siding, and has a two story extension at the rear. One distinguishing feature is the first story semi-hexagonal projecting bay at the south bay of the front. Windows, except for those in the projecting bay have two over two pane sash which appear to be original. Those in the projection have single pane sash. One of the side by side front door has been enclosed with plywood. An across-the-front porch has a hipped roof and is supported with turned posts. The turn of the century construction date is based on the light frame construction, two over two windows and overall form of the house. It is indicative of the overall conservative and residential character of Maugansville. This house type was used by German sectarians from the 18th through the 20th centuries.
