Approximate date Ca. 1910

This house is located on the southeast corner of Village Mill Drive and Garden View Road. It is built entirely of rock faced concrete block, which helps to place the construction data at the 1910 period. Traditional in form and detailing, the house has a four bay front elevation with two center front doors. There are only two windows at the second story level. A distinctive feature is the wraparound porch, supported by square posts, along the west and north elevations. There is also an entrance in the west gable wall, in the center bay which opens onto Garden View Road. The house retains an original standing seam roof. Windows have single pane sash and the doors have large glass panes and are beneath narrow transoms. A one story extension is attached to the south gable end and there is an enclosed porch at the east elevation. The extra door in the north gable end could suggest an additional use for the building in keeping with its prominent corner location. A frame gable roofed stable is located at the rear of the property.

This house exemplifies Maugansville's conservative architectural expression based on its Mennonite cultural heritage, and its development during the early 20th century.
