19th Century

This two story, three bay brick dwelling is a vernacular structure which would appear to date from the third quarter of the 19th century. The building stands on part of a tract of land called "Delemere" where Bartholomew Booth, an Anglican Clergyman had a school in the 1770's and 1780's. Members of the Booth family also operated a grist mill which stood on the opposite side of the road from this house and was functioning during the late 18th and 19th centuries. Most probably this house was associated with the milling operation, and may possibly have been built as the miller's dwelling.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This house is located on the west side of Maryland route 68 at Devil's Backbone, immediately across the road from Devil's Backbone County Park, northwest of Boonsboro in Washington County. The house stands on sloping ground just above the Antietam Creek and faces northeast.

The structure is a two story, three bay brick dwelling resting on low fieldstone foundations. A wing extending to the rear is sheathed with siding and a two bay frame addition is attached to the rear of the house at the west corner. The walls of the main section display American or common bonding at all elevations with, generally, six rows of stretcher bricks between courses of headers. Flat arches of brick are present above windows and doors at the two main stories.

The house is relatively lang and narrow with a rather large area of wall between the openings, which appear to have been spaced symmetrically in the front elevation. Windows have narrow beaded casings which hold six over six pane double hung sashes. Hinge pins remaining in the casings indicate that shutters were present at one time. The main entrance is centered on the front wall. It appears to be framed similarly to the windows and includes a four light transom. Extending across most of the front elevation is a modern porch on concrete block foundations.

A standing seam sheet metal roof extends beyond the end walls of the house. Brick chimneys with several courses of corbeling at their tops are located inside the end walls. Plain boxing finishes the eaves.

The house appears to be in good condition and stands on a lot containing 1.37 acres.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This two story, three bay brick dwelling is a vernacular structure which would appear to date from the third quarter of the 19th century. The building stands on part of a tract of land called "Delemere" where Bartholomew Booth, an Anglican Clergyman had a school in the 1770's and 1780's. Members of the Booth family also operated a grist mill which stood on the opposite side of the road from this house and was functioning during the late 18th and 19th centuries. Most probably this house was associated with the milling operation, and may possibly have been built as the miller's dwelling. It is not depicted on an 1859 Map of Washington County. A structure is shown, however, at this location in the 1877 Washington County Atlas. The style of brickwork used in this house, the type of windows, casings and chimneys all suggest a building date during the 1860's or 70's.
