Description

This two and a half story, four bay aluminum sided frame house is said to have been built by C.M. Keedy in 1853. Like many of the houses on the west side of North Main Street, this one has a raised basement. A porch across the front protects both the main story and basement. Windows have single sash, some with early 20th century molded architraves.

According to Margaret Burtner Moats' History of Keedysville, this place was built in 1853 by C.M. Keedy. The basement was a school, then a shoe shop for David Bell. Local historian, Ken Ellis states that this building served as a boarding house and livery in the 1870s.
