Description

This two and a half story residential and commercial building with German siding is similar in size and form to its neighbor to the north. It is five bays wide with a low pitched hipped roof covered with standing seam sheet metal. Windows have six over six pane sash at the second story. First story windows were modified in the early 1900s with single pane sash. The entrance is located in the center bay of the main story level and is reached by a flight of steps leading to a three bay entrance porch which also shelters a portion of the basement. The basement contains a commercial space.

The cornice trim consists of a wide frieze band to which is attached a course of brackets.

This building, according to local informants, housed a sandwich shop in the early 1900s. The 1877 Atlas shows this property to have been in the hands of R. Dover or Doner. It is an example of a vernacular Greek Revival influenced building, reflecting Keedysville's development.
