Description

This log house is a one and a half story, three bay structure sheathed with aluminum siding. It has an enclosed porch across its front or south elevation and a lean-to extension to the rear. A brick chimney is located inside the west gable end and a newer block chimney outside the east end wall.

This house is said to have been built in 1880 by a local contractor and developer by the name of Kitzmiller. Its general form and appearance suggests the influence of older building types.
