This farmstead consisting of a group of period stone buildings provides an excellent example of dated regional architecture of the Cumberland Valley. The house, built in 1818 of the native limestone displays Federal characteristics in the rural vernacular idiom. Worthy of particular note is the main entrance with a semicircular fanlight above the door. A secondary dwelling, domestic outbuildings and a barn are all also built of the native stone. In excellent condition, the buildings are part of a prosperous dairy farm and contribute to the history of agriculture in Washington County.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The dairy known as Breezy View Farm is located on the north side of Landis Road just west of White Hall Road southeast of Hagerstown in Washington County, Maryland. The buildings are set on rolling farmland with the house facing east and the barn south.

The house is a large two story, seven bay stone structure utilizing roughly coursed native limestone. Set high in the south gable is a rectangular tablet in which is inscribed the date August the 6th, 1818, J. and E. M. Another series of letters at the bottom of the stone read D E L C A. Other features of the masonry include a group of three stones above each opening. The center stone is small and resembles a rough keystone. The facade of the house extends five bays from the south end and is then recessed several feet, its two more northerly bays being a double porch which is included under the main roof span. In the rear or west elevation, a door in the second bay from the south end has been filled in with stone.

Windows and doors have moderately wide frames finished with a bead at the inside edge. Their corner joints are secured with wooden pegs. Hinge pins for shutters remain in the frames. All windows at the two principal stories have nine over six pane double hung sashes. Small six light windows are present at the attic level.

The main entrance is centered in the projecting section of the front elevation, being located in the second bay from the south end. The door treatment is relatively elaborate among farm houses in Washington County. The door has six raised panels and is hung within matching paneled jambs. Above the door is a semicircular fanlight with ray muntins. Trimming the entire area is molded woodwork with pilasters along the sides of the opening. The entrance is sheltered by a one bay, one story pedimented porch. It is supported by pairs of thin chamfered square posts and partially enclosed with a plain balustrade. Set in the surface of the pediment is an applied molded oval panel. Other entrances, much less elaborate, are located at the first and second story levels of the double porch in the second bay from the north end. These doors, like the main entrance have six raised panels and paneled jambs. Above them are plain rectangular transoms. The double porch has small posts similar to those of the entrance porch, and is enclosed at the upper level with three rails. The area within the gable that forms the end of the porch under the roof is sheathed with random width beaded board siding.

The roof of the house is covered with standing seam sheet metal and terminates with tapered barge boards set directly against the end walls. Brick chimneys with corbels at their tops are located inside the end walls and at the interior of the house at the point where the recess occurs. These chimneys appear to have been rebuilt. Several courses of molding finish the eaves.

Immediately north of the house is a one story stone wash house or out kitchen. Near it is a square smoke house also of stone construction with a steeply pitched hipped roof. Further north of the house is a two story, three bay stone secondary dwelling which bears a date stone inscribed with the initials J. M. and the year 1853. To the west is a large stone end bank barn with what appears to be a date tablet and the characteristic vertical ventilator slit. It has a frame fore bay which may be an addition. Modern dairy barns, silos and outbuildings are also part of the complex.

The farm is part of the land grant "Resurvey on the Old Fox Deceived" and includes 151 acres. The buildings are in excellent condition.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This farmstead consisting of a group of period stone buildings provides an excellent example of dated regional architecture of the Cumberland Valley. The house, built in 1818 of the native limestone displays Federal characteristics in the rural vernacular idiom. Worthy of particular note is the main entrance with a semicircular fanlight above the door. A secondary dwelling, domestic outbuilding and a barn are all also built of the native stone. In excellent condition, the buildings are part of a prosperous dairy farm and contribute to the history of agriculture in Washington County.

The initials, J. M. which appear on the date stone probably stand for Jacob Middlekauff who purchased 151 acres of the "Resurvey of Old Fox Deceived" from Robert Hughes, executor for the estate of James Walling on May 2, 1812 (Y/182). The farm remained in the Middlekauff family until 1861 when Henry Landis, Jacob S. Middlekauff and Samuel S. Middlekauff, trustees sold the property to John Huffer, (IN15/60). In several transactions, the farm was passed to various members of the Huffer family until 1872 when Jonas C. Huffer sold it to William Shifler, (LBN1/569, WMCKK3/795). In 1897 Samuel E. and Frederick J. Schifler, trustees, sold the farm to Jonas C. Doub. Today it remains in the Doub family. (106/99).
