DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This farmstead is located on Mt. Briar Road at Eakles Mills south of Keedysville in Washington County, Maryland. The house is situated on a bluff overlooking the road and faces east. Ruins of a barn which also faced east remain on the opposite side of Mt. Briar Road, and are included in this nomination.

The house is a two-story, three-bay log structure with an exposed basement at the front elevation. The walls rest on fieldstone foundations and are sheathed with asbestos shingles. Extending to the rear or west is a two-story, three-bay addition of stone construction. To this wing has been added a one-story, two-bay stone kitchen.

Because of the exposed foundations, the house from the front appears to be three stories high with a ground level entrance into the basement. At the rear of the log section, part of the wall surface has been exposed revealing "V"-notched corner joining and some rot damage.

Windows and doors are aligned with each other in the walls and appear relatively small in relation to wall area. Windows have either six-over-six pane, double hung sash or two-over-two sash. Windows in the stone addition have massive framing with pegged mortise and tenon joints. All of these windows retain six-over-six sash.

The main entrance is located in the center bay of the front elevation. The door has heavy raised panels on its exterior surface and vertical board sheathing on its interior surfaces. It is hung below a three-light transom. Other entrances are located on the south elevation of the addition at the first and second stories, the upper level door having been boarded shut at the exterior when a porch roof was rebuilt across it. Apparently there was originally a double porch extending along the entire south elevation of the addition. A shed roof porch extends along the main story at the front elevation.

The roof of the house is sheathed with corrugated sheet metal and terminates with barge boards set directly against the end walls. Chimneys are placed on the interior of the house, one in the log section just north of center and the other in the stone section, west of center. The one-story stone kitchen addition has a large stone inside end chimney located north of the roof peak.

The interior of the log house is bisected by a central stair and entrance hall. Two rooms are located to the north of the hall and one large room is located to the south. The only fireplace in the log house is located in the northeast room at the main story. It cuts diagonally across the two interior walls. This fireplace is trimmed with a mantel showing Georgian stylistic influence as well as elements of Germanic folk art. An ovolo molding forms crossettes at the corners of the opening; above is a panel with naive, applied trim suggesting a vine or bough. Below this fireplace in the cellar is a triangular stone pier with a round arch lined with cut stone voussoirs.

The summer beam is exposed at both the first and second stories. Massive studs form the walls. Traces of paint on the studs suggest that they may have been exposed at one time. Interior doors have six raised panels and most are attached with strap hinges. Ends of the stair risers are trimmed with cut designs resembling an open flower or pinwheel.

The interior of the stone section has a large service fireplace in the room directly behind the log house. Doors in this part of the house also have six raised panels. At the second story a built-in cupboard with a paneled door is recessed into the west end wall. It would appear that the stone addition was constructed within a relatively short time after the log house was built.

Outbuildings are located north of the house and include a stone springhouse and a frame butchering building or outkitchen with a massive stone exterior chimney.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This farmstead, known for many years as the "Snively Farm," contains an 18th century central chimney Germanic log house with a late 18th or early 19th century stone addition, outbuildings and ruins of a bank barn. Architecturally the house is particularly significant as an 18th century example showing the influence of ethnic building traditions. Stylistic elements and construction techniques suggest that the front or log portion of the house was probably built during the last two decades of the 18th century. It would appear that the stone wing was added shortly thereafter. The building retains a substantial amount of original work, such as doors, trim and hardware. Worthy of particular note is the fireplace treatment in the log section where the mantelpiece shows the mixed influence of Georgian stylistic elements and Germanic folk art. Other important 18th century features include exposed interior framing and the central chimney location associated with Germanic traditions.

Not surprisingly, this house was built by a family of German origin. It and another nearby stone house also dating from the late 18th or early 19th century (located at the south end of the village of Eakle's Mill-WA-II-268) were once part of a large farm owned by the Snively's* since the 18th century. Records in Washington County do not indicate when Conrad Snively, the first member of the family to own the property here, settled in the Keedysville area. However, at his death in 1804 he left his land to his son, Casper (B/50). Conrad Snively was a native of Germany who came to this country, first residing in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania and then moving to the area near Keedysville. Casper Snively was prosperous and owned a large amount of land south of Keedysville. In his will made in 1833 and probated in 1839, he left all of his real estate to his son, Jacob. Jacob lived on the farm and is said to have kept a wagon stand and hotel and owned a sawmill and gristmill presumably one of the latter two was later known as Eakle's Mill. The property then passed to Washington C. Snively whose widow sold it out of the family in 1932 (Will Book D/334, E/638, Deed Record 104/639). It is not known at this time whether this house was built by Conrad Snively or by his son, Casper. The stone house, located about 1/4 mile to the south was also a part of this farm and has a similar window and door arrangement (at present several small lots separate the two old farmhouses).

This farmstead is located on Mt. Briar Road at Eakles Mills south of Keedysville in Washington County, Maryland. The house is situated on a bluff overlooking the road and faces east. Ruins of a barn which also faced east remain on the opposite side of Mt. Briar Road.

The house is a two story three bay log structure with an exposed basement at the front elevation. The walls rest on fieldstone foundations and are sheathed with asbestos shingles. Extending to the rear or west is a two story, three bay addition of stone construction. To this wing has been added a one story, two bay stone kitchen.
