211 East Main Street is a south-facing, horizontally massed, symmetrical, three-bay, two-and-a-half-story, frame, freestanding, residential structure on a stone foundation. The building is set back from the public-right-of-way and is stuccoed. The standing-seam metal, side-gable roof has two massive, endwall, composite stone and brick chimneys. The first floor of the front facade is shielded by a simple, shed-roof open porch supported by thin chamfered posts. The center-bay entrance consists of a slightly recessed modern interior door and a modern storm door. Fenestration is composed of single, rectangular, double-hung, six-over-six windows. There is a one-story rear wing.

A building of the same configuration is noted on the 1877 map of the town as being owned by E. Smith. The structure is noted on the 1922 Sanborn as 506 East Main.

The building is within the Western Maryland Geographic Organization, the Development Period of Agricultural-Industrial Transition, and falls within the Historic Period Theme of Architecture, Landscape Architecture and Community Planning.
