37 St. Paul Street is a south-facing, horizontally massed, two-story, three-bay, frame, freestanding, residential structure. The building, which is set at the public-right-of-way, rests on a stone foundation and is covered in manufactured siding. It has a side-gable, tin roof with open eaves and exterior chimney. A hipped-roof porch extends across the facade and protects the east-bay entrance. The door has a glazed panel above two horizontal wood panels. The fenestration is double-hung, two-over-two windows. The structure has a two-story rear ell.

A building of similar configuration is indicated on the 1877 map of the town. The 1897-1940 Sanborn maps number the structure 152 St. Paul and indicate that it had a two-story open porch facing east.

The building is within the Western Maryland Geographic Organization, the probable Development Period of Agricultural-Industrial Transition, and falls within the Historic Period Theme of Architecture, Landscape Architecture, and Community Planning.
