Approximate date 1871-1963 (cornerstone)

Known now as the Bethel United Methodist Church, this was formerly the Bethel United Brethren Church. It is a gable-fronted brick building with simple Greek Revival and Gothic Revival influence. A cornerstone reads "Bethel United Brethren Church 1871-1963." Bricks are laid in common bond upon limestone foundations. The walls have been sandblasted. The building is four bays in depth with bays separated by corbeled pilasters. Windows have segmentally arched tops. The entrance is in the center bay of the west gable end and has a round arched top. The entrance gable has corbeled pilasters at the corners and additional corbeling across the base of the gable suggesting a pediment. Atop the gable is a square bell tower which has been enclosed with siding. A brick furnace flue is located at the southeast corner of the building. This building is significant as one of three churches in Rohrsersville, all dating from the 1870s and '80's and all of German denominations. This one apparently was founded in 1800, and located one mile south of the village in a log building. It was rebuilt in Rohrsersville in 1842 and replaced in 1871.
