Located on the southwest corner of Rohrersville School Road and Main Street in the Village of Rohrersville is this rectangular hipped roof brick house which appears to date from the 1850s or 1860s. It is built on a hillside with its front facing north into the village. It is of common bond construction at all elevations. The front elevation is four bays wide with a window, window, door, window arrangement. Because of the sloping terrain, the main level at the front is elevated and accessed by an across-the-front porch which has been reconstructed but generally follows the pattern of the original. Windows have six over six or single pane sash. The front entrance is topped by a three light transom. There is also an entrance with double doors and a four light transom in the east elevation. This east wall is two bays deep. The house is distinguished by having a hipped roof. The covering is standing seam sheet metal. Also on the property is a frame hog barn. The property appears on the 1877 Atlas map as being the residence of Mrs. Eader. The common bond facade, hipped roof construction and narrow window and door frames indicate a construction date in the third quarter of the 19th century. 2 contributing buildings.
