Thomas J. Walter House
Nanticoke
Private

c. 1872

Credit for the construction of this two-story, three-part frame house that stands in the center of the village of Nanticoke is awarded to Thomas J. Walter, who purchased part of the St. Albans tract in two acquisitions in 1871 and 1872. The three-part house he and his wife, Mary, built shortly afterwards followed traditional vernacular forms for the third quarter of the nineteenth century. The main block was built with a side hall/parlor plan served by an exterior, corbeled base brick chimney. A stylish turned baluster staircase with mahogany newel posts and a ramped handrail was the principal decorative feature of the narrow passage. The parlor was plainly finished with a Greek Revival mantel. The bedroom over the parlor was unheated. Attached to the south side of the two-story main house was a contemporaneous story-and-a-half, one-room plan wing. The shift in the roofline is common to the stepped or "telescope" style houses indigenous to the region. The south wing was built with a corbeled base chimney as well. Attached to the back of the south wing is a slightly shorter story-and-a-half, one-room kitchen wing that retains a large corbeled base chimney stack. Joining the house on the lot is a single-story, one-room plan summer kitchen.

Thomas J. Walter died intestate, and the property passed to his wife Mary, and then to their only surviving child, Bernice. Bernice G. Walter retained ownership of her parent's house until 1970.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Thomas J. Walter house stands at 20509 Nanticoke Road in the center of the village of Nanticoke, Wicomico County, Maryland. The two-story, three-part frame house faces west with the gable roof oriented on a north/south axis.

Estimated to date around 1872, the two-story, three-part frame house is supported on a low brick foundation and the exterior is covered with aluminum siding over plain weatherboards. Each section is covered by a medium pitched asphalt shingle roof. The two-story, side hall/parlor main block is extended to the south by a story-and-a-half, one-room plan section, which is extended to the east by a story-and-a-half rear wing. Joining the house on the lot is a single-story one-room plan summer kitchen.

The west (main) facade of the side hall/parlor house follows an asymmetrical fenestration. The two-bay facade is defined by a side entrance that retains a heavily molded four-panel door with arched top panels. The adjacent bay is filled with a six-over-six sash window flanked with louvered shutters. Lighting the second floor are a pair of unevenly spaced six-over-six sash windows. The west wall of the adjacent story-and-a-half section is marked by a four-panel door and an adjacent six-over-six sash window. Sheltering the entire facade is a hip roofed porch supported by turned posts and embellished with sawn brackets. The base of the roof of both sections is finished with an extended eave and a sloped soffit.

The north gable end of the main block is dominated by an exterior common bond brick chimney that features a corbeled base. Six-over-six sash windows flank the chimney and light the first and second floors. The south gable end of the southern section is finished in a similar fashion with an exterior corbeled base chimney flanked by six-over-six sash windows on the first and second floors. The chimney stack on the south end retains a corbeled cap.

Extending from the east side of the one-room plan south wing is a story-and-a-half, one-room plan wing that features an exterior corbeled base chimney of wider proportions than the other two sections. A side entrance, sheltered by a gable roofed hood, is filled with a partially glazed mid nineteenth century door and it is flanked by a six-over-six sash window.

The interior has survived with portions of its third quarter of the nineteenth century woodwork intact. The side hall is dominated by a turned baluster stair that is distinguished by a boldly turned newel post and a ramped mahogany handrail supported by turned balusters. A four-panel door framed by a plain surround opens into the adjacent parlor, which retains a mid nineteenth century mantel defined by plain pilasters and a plain frieze. The south wing room has been remodeled and the mantel has been replaced with a brick fireplace. The old kitchen survives with a corner staircase enclosed behind narrow beaded edge tongue-and-groove boards.

7.1 DESCRIPTION

Thomas J. Walter House
20509 Nanticoke Road
Nanticoke, Wicomico County, Maryland

Standing off the southeast corner of the rear wing is a single-story, one-room plan frame kitchen supported on a low brick foundation and covered with a medium pitched asphalt shingle roof. The south side is marked by two bays with a centrally positioned four-panel door flanked on the east side by a six-over-six sash window. A six-over-six sash window also pierces the center of the west gable end. The north side of the kitchen is defined by a center door and adjacent window as well. Rising through the east gable end is a single flue brick stove chimney. The interior of the kitchen is fitted with narrow tongue-and-groove beaded edge board, which covers the walls and ceiling. Fixed in the southwest corner of the kitchen is a built-in cupboard of narrow beaded edge tongue-and-groove boards.
