Andrew W. Anderson Farmhouse
Catchpenny vicinity
Private

c. 1850-60

Historically identified as the Andrew W. Anderson farmhouse, this two-story, three-bay frame dwelling stands on the north side of Nanticoke Road east of the rural intersection known as Catchpenny. The center hall/single-pile dwelling, estimated to date around 1850-60, has an eight-panel front door framed by a plain corner block surround and topped by a six-light transom. Evenly spaced six-over-six sash windows light the first and second floors. The house is extended to the rear by a two-story, one-room plan kitchen wing.

Chain of title research for this property indicates that Andrew W. Anderson held title to a two-hundred and eight-acre parcel of land, part of which was known as "Devil's Woodyard." At the time of Andrew Anderson's death, his will written in 1876 and probated three years later, bequeathed to his son Perry Harrison Anderson, "my Home Plantation whereon I now reside containing Two Hundred and Eight and three eights acres of Land More or less." He also made a provision that the "crop on the Dickenson farm during the year of my decease" would fall to Perry as well as the rest of his estate. Perry H. Anderson held title to his father's farm until 1891. During the early to mid twentieth century the property was known as the "Fred Pollitt farm," named for Frederick A. Pollitt who owned the farmland between 1920 and 1937.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Andrew W. Anderson house stands at 26232 Nanticoke Road a mile east of the intersection known as Catchpenny, Wicomico County, Maryland. The two-story, three-bay frame house faces southeast with the gable roof oriented on a northeast/southwest axis.

Estimated to date around 1850-60, the two-story, three-bay, frame house is supported on a modern brick foundation and the exterior is clad with vinyl siding. The medium pitched gable roof is sheathed with asphalt shingles. Attached to the back of the main block is a two-story, one-room plan kitchen wing that gives the entire house a tee shape. Joining the house on the lot is a small frame outbuilding.

The southeast (main) facade is a symmetrical three-bay elevation with a center entrance and flanking six-over-six sash windows. The entrance is marked by a mid-nineteenth century eight-panel door framed by a plain corner block surround and topped by a six-light transom. The front door is sheltered by a small gable roofed stoop of modern construction. The second floor is lighted by three, evenly spaced six-over-six sash windows. The base of the roof is finished with a boxed cornice covered with vinyl.

The northeast and southwest gable ends are alike with thirteen-course common bond brick chimneys centered on each wall. The shoulders are corbeled. Six-over-six sash windows flank the chimney stacks on each floor. The attic is lighted by small two-over-two sash windows. The gable end is finished with a flush gable end, and the bargeboard molding is covered with vinyl.

The two-story, one-room plan kitchen extends to the rear and is enlarged by a partially enclosed shed roof addition on its northeast side. A partially glazed door opens into the kitchen, and a six-over-six sash window lights the second floor. A modern brick chimney rises against the gable end, which is a blind wall.

The interior was not seen.
