Nineteenth and twentieth centuries

Located halfway between Vienna and Sharptown, the village of Riverton is situated on a sandy ridge of land bordering the Nanticoke River. Once a thriving village of several hundred residents, Riverton has subsided into a quiet residential river community surrounding the local church. In 1891 the village was described for R. L. Polk's Maryland and District of Columbia gazetteer as Situated on the Nanticoke River, in Wicomico County, 16 miles northwest of Salisbury court house, and 10 from Laurel, Del., the shipping station, on M & D Div of the Philadelphia Wilmington & Baltimore R R. Seaford, Del. is the location of the nearest bank.

The population at the time was established at 250 residents. The early history of the village is not well defined, but it was known as "Bacon Quarter" prior to a name change around the time of the Civil War. Sophronia Taylor suggested changing the name to Riverton when a post office was established. At its economic peak around 1890 to 1910 the village boasted regular service by steamboat and a host of local businesses including a canning factory, several stores, a shirt factory, and local sawmills.

With the discontinuation of steamship service after World War I and the increasing mobility of private residents with automobiles, commerce in the small community stagnated. Riverton today is a quiet river community of private residences located on or near Nanticoke River. The Riverton United Methodist Church remains an active institution in the village.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The village of Riverton is located on the south shore of the Nanticoke River southwest of Sharptown in Wicomico County, Maryland. Riverton Road (County Road 460) winds in a northeast/southwest direction and parallels the river until turns at a right angle in the heart of the village. Two side roads, Riverton Wharf Road (County Road 490) and Schoolhouse Road (County Road 456) intersect Riverton Road. The terrain along the river is generally level with a few sandy ridges along the north side of Riverton Road.

The building stock that defines Riverton dates from the second half of the nineteenth century and the first quarter of the twentieth century, with the majority of dwellings dating between 1870 and 1920. Approximately one-dozen (12) frame dwellings are oriented along Riverton Road and the two side roads. Repeating familiar nineteenth and early twentieth-century house forms, many of the dwellings are two-story, three-bay frame structures with side passage/single pile plans or center passage/single pile plans. Several dwellings have asymmetrical plans with projecting pavilions.

Supported on low brick foundations, the houses are sheathed with a combination of artificial sidings including asbestos, vinyl, and aluminum, and the steeply pitched gable roofs are largely covered with asphalt shingles. Two-over-two sash windows or replacement windows light the first and second floors, and a few houses retain decorative elements that include turned post porches and decorative fishscale shingles.

Centered in the community is the Riverton United Methodist Church (See WI-355), built in 1936-37 after the late nineteenth-century building burned.
