1903

Marking the northeast corner of North Division and Elizabeth streets is the Charles Bethke house, a two-and-a-half story Queen Anne frame dwelling erected in 1903 by builder W. J. Ennis, who penciled his name, date, and the fact that is built this house. Designed in the Queen Anne style, the asymmetrically planned residence features a two-story octagonal on its Elizabeth street side. Other architectural elements common to the period include the Tuscan columned wrap-around porch and the fishscale shingles which cover the gable end of the two-and-a-half story pavilions that mark the north and west sides.

Clothing retailer Charles Bethke financed construction of this house in the year he purchased this corner lot from Southey King White for $1,200. According to local tradition, Charles Bethke, of German descent, owned and operated a men's clothing store in downtown Salisbury during the first decades of the twentieth century. He and his wife Augusta continued to live and work in Salisbury until the outbreak of World War I, when anti-German sentiments were elevated to the point when the Bethkes decided to relocate to Baltimore. Charles Bethke and his wife sold the house and lot in 1922.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Charles Bethke house is located at 601 North Division Street in the Newtown Historic District in Salisbury, Wicomico County, Maryland. The two-and-a-half story asymmetrical planned Queen Anne dwelling faces west and the steeply pitched hip roof is oriented on an east/west axis.

Documented to date to 1903 and erected by house builder W. J. Ennis, the two-and-a-half story hip roofed Queen Anne dwelling is supported on a raised common bond brick foundation, and the exterior is uniformly clad with vinyl siding. The steeply pitched hip roof is extended by gable roofed pavilions on the north and west sides as well as a two-story octagonal tower on the south side. Stretching to the rear is a two-story kitchen wing.

The west (main) elevation is an asymmetrical front with a side double door entrance sheltered by a Tuscan columned porch that wraps around the north, west and south sides. A small gable-front roof marks the entrance bay and the gable is sheathed with fishscale shingles. Stretching between the Tuscan columns is a turned baluster handrail. The uneven wall surface is dominated by a three-sided two-and-a-half story pavilion pierced by single-pane sash windows. The gable front of the pavilion is pierced by a two-over-two sash window in the center of a field of fishscale shingles. Rising through the center of the main block is an internal brick stove chimney topped by a corbeled cap.

The north elevation features a two-and-a-half story single-bay pavilion on the north side lighted by single pane sash windows on the first and second floors. Fishscale shingle cover the gable end around the attic window.

Attached to the south side is a two-story semi-octagonal tower topped by a octagonal spire. Narrow single-pane sash windows light the first and second floors.

Attached to the back of the main block is a two-story service wing extended further east with a single-story section. A Tuscan columned side porch shelters a side entrance.

Although the interior was not seen, the owner produced a piece of door molding inscribed in pencil on its reverse side, "W. J. Ennis, 1903, Builder of this house, Salisbury, Maryland."-

The relatively intact exterior detail of this house qualify it for listing in Category B, which identifies buildings that should be preserved since they represent a period of architectural style and contribute to the overall historic nature of the Newtown district.
