1891

St. Mark's Methodist Episcopal church, erected in 1891 now stands on a new site approximately a mile north of its original location near the intersection of Levin Dashiell Road and Sycamore Lane. Dated by a marble cornerstone, the frame church was built on an axial plan with a vestibule in front and a small apse to the rear. Long four-over-four sash windows light the sanctuary, which is trimmed with beaded board wainscoting.

Although an exact date for the organization of this African-American congregation has not surfaced, it occupied a building on this site within ten years following the Civil War. Known at the time as "Johnson's Chapel," the church was joined at rural intersection by a "Colored School" in 1876 when the Wicomico County school commissioners purchased a small parcel of land next to the church from Daniel F. and Sarah E. Melson. The deed describes the 1/4-acre parcel as "...adjoining the Colored Methodist Church lot." Several years later, in September 1891, the trustees of "Johnson's Chappel" purchased 12 perches of ground which was located due north of the existing church. This transfer coincides with the construction of the extant building. The congregation decided to change its name to St. Mark's M. E. Church, a decision that was probably encouraged by the Methodist conference.

The congregation dwindled to a few members by the mid twentieth century, and ultimately the church was left to deteriorate. The church was moved approximately a mile north in an effort to preserve it.

St. Mark's M. E. Church is located on the west side of Levin Dashiell Road approximately a mile north of its original site at the intersection of Levin Dashiell Road and Sycamore Lane in the vicinity of Hebron, Wicomico County, Maryland. The church, on its new site, faces east with the gable roof oriented on an east/west axis.

Built in 1891, the single-story frame church is supported on a modern concrete block foundation. The original marble cornerstone was saved and is fixed in the southeast corner. It is inscribed "St. Mark's M. E. Church, 1891." Sheathed with plain weatherboard siding, the church is covered by a steeply pitched gable roof of asphalt shingles.

The east (main) facade features a shorter single-story gable roofed vestibule pierced by a double door entrance. The double doors feature shallow profile panels. To each side are four-over-four sash windows, and a triangular window pierces the gable end. The edge of the roof is finished with an extended eave and open soffits.

The sides of the church are defined by three four-over-four sash windows, and a single-flue brick stack pierces the roof on the south side. The edge of the roof is extended and the rafter ends are exposed.

The west (rear) wall is defined by a shorter single story gable roofed apse with single-pane sash windows on each side. The west wall of the apse is a plain weatherboard surface.

The interior has been stripped of its plaster. Beaded board wainscoting trims the perimeter of the room. Located at the west end is a low, rounded front altar platform.
