Charles R. Disharoon House
Salisbury
Private

1901-02

The year following his election as the mayor of Salisbury, Charles Robbins Disharoon purchased this corner lot bordering West Isabella and North Division streets and proceeded through the construction of a finely detailed Queen Anne style residence. This lot, across the street from the twenty-acre estate of Elihu E. and Nannie Jackson, was a highly desired location in the "Newtown" neighborhood that quickly developed after the 1886 fire. For decades after the fire, every year was punctuated with major construction projects. In the 1880s, the Jacksons financed the construction of their sprawling forty-room frame house they called "The Oaks," and in 1897 Frederick A. Grier, Sr. built his large Queen Anne dwelling on the northeast corner of the intersection.

In the design and construction of his residence, Charles R. Disharoon favored the prevailing taste for the time in the Queen Anne style, which had been popularized in Salisbury more than a decade earlier by James Cannon. He financed the construction of what is commonly known as the Gillis-Grier house on the corner of North Division and East William streets. (See WI-13) Particularly characteristic of the style are the asymmetrical elevations and variety of architectural forms juxtaposed with one another. On the Disharoon house the northeast corner is dominated by a three-story conical roofed tower, not unlike the Frederick Grier house across the street. Instead of containing the principal entrance like the Grier house, the main doorway is located on the North Division Street facade under the Ionic columned wraparound porch. Built over the course of seven to eight months, the house was ready for occupancy in March 1902.

Charles Robbins Disharoon, born in 1858 in Worcester County, was a leading lumber merchant, farmer, and politician. He entered the lumber business through his association with E. S. Adkins & Co. and ultimately started his own manufacturing plant, centering on wooden crates, fruit baskets, box shooks, and barrels. He also owned extensive agricultural acreage where he specialized in the growth of apples and peaches. He was also involved at high levels in banking and other commercial concerns in the city. He was president of the Peoples National Bank, a director in the Citizens Gas Company and the Salisbury Realty Company, and he held a director's position in the Wicomico Hotel Company and the Wicomico Building & Loan Association. The corner house and lot remained in Disharoon family hands until the late 1930s when it was sold to Watson D. and Robert W. Mitchell. Mitchell family ownership of the Queen Anne house and lot was maintained until 1978.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Charles R. Disharoon house stands on the southwest corner of the intersection of North Division and West Isabella streets in the center of the Newtown Historic District in Salisbury, Wicomico County, Maryland. The two-and-a-half story Queen Anne frame dwelling faces east and its address is 408 North Division Street.

Built in 1901-02, the two-and-a-half story frame dwelling follows an asymmetrical plan with a partially excavated cellar. The exterior is sheathed with a combination of aluminum siding and fishscale shingles. The main block is covered by a pyramidal roof with various towers and gable roofed pavilions or wings extending in all directions. The assortment of roofs are covered with slate.

The east (main) elevation is dominated by a circular, three-story corner tower topped by a conical roof. An Ionic columned wraparound porch shelters the first floor on the east and north sides. The tower is pierced by curved single-pane sash windows. Principal entrance is gained through a centrally positioned six-panel door that is framed by leaded glass sidelights and transom. There are half columns to each side of the front door. A secondary entrance opens through the three-sided bay window south of the main entrance. The entrance bay is enhanced visually by a cross gable that projects forward of the porch. The gable end pediment is finished with fishscale shingles. The second floor is defined by an asymmetrical fenestration with a second floor porch flanked on the south side by a three-sided bay window and to the north by a single-pane sash windows and the corner tower. The second floor porch is incorporated under the large gable-front roof that tops the two-story bay window. The porch is defined by a shingled knee wall and short Tuscan columns that rise to a shingled entablature. A second floor door is framed by sidelights and a three-light transom. The large window that pierces the front of the adjacent bay has Gothic pointed panes in the upper sash. The gable end pediment, pierced by paired diamond-pane windows, is sheathed with fishscale shingles. The slope of the pyramidal roof between the gable-front roof and tower is marked by an eyebrow window.

The north elevation is an asymmetrical facade with a semi-octagonal tower anchoring the northeast corner. The tower is capped by a low pitched octagonal roof. Centered on the roof is a large gable roofed dormer filled with a triple window distinguished by diamond panes in the upper sashes. The gable-end pediment, sheathed with fishscale shingles, is trimmed with a boxed cornice embellished with a dentiled molding. Piercing the roof are several brick stove chimneys topped by corbelled caps.

Extending to the south from the main block is a large two-story wing that has a separate entrance defined by a single-bay Tuscan columned portico. The south wall has an asymmetrical fenestration, and the gable end is sheathed with fishscale shingles.

There is a single story hip roofed garage west of the main block.

occurred on October 3, 1916. He was one of the foremost dry goods merchants of Baltimore and stood high in the esteem of his fellowmen. He was the father of five children: Everard L., now a resident of Chicago; William M., deceased; Mary S., the wife of Thomas B. Gay of Richmond, Virginia; Marguerite, who married Ridgely Gaither; and Cornelia Lee. Dr. and Mrs. Larned have two sons, Charles Willis, Jr., and Everard Pattison.

The Doctor enjoys outdoor life, hunting being his favorite sport. He is affiliated with the Protestant Episcopal church and his political support is given to the democratic party. His professional connections are with the Baltimore City Medical Society, the Medical & Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland, the American Medical Association and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He also belongs to the Johns Hopkins Club and the Baltimore Club, the Bachelors Cotillon, and the Society of the Colonial Wars.

ERNEST JOSEPH NEWCOMER.

Ernest Joseph Newcomer, district manager of Western Maryland for the R. L. Dollings Company of Philadelphia, is a young man who knows the value of a consistent, painstaking effort, and accuracy in matters of detail. The steady progress that has characterized his career in the business world is largely the result of his possession of these qualities. He was born in Sleepy Creek, Morgan county, West Virginia, on the 28th of August, 1892. His parents were natives of Maryland. The father, William Martin Newcomer, died in 1921. The mother, formerly Miss Emma Katherine Funk, survives him.

Ernest Joseph Newcomer came to Hagerstown with his parents when he was but eight years old, and in this city completed his public school education, graduating from the high school. He attended the Columbia Business College of Hagerstown for three years, then accepted a position on the clerical force of the First National Bank. During the eight years he spent in this institution Mr. Newcomer thoroughly acquainted himself with all the details of the business, devoting especial study to the departments that had to do with securities and investments. In 1923 he became district manager of the Baltimore office of Henry L. Doherty & Company, bankers. Henry L. Doherty & Company, with headquarters at No. 60 Wall street, New York, are large public utilities operators. Since Mr. Newcomer assumed charge of the Baltimore office for Henry L. Doherty & Company the business of that office has enjoyed a rapid yet substantial growth. Since all such financial firms depend upon the confidence of the public for their stability, the rapid growth of this business is a convincing evidence of Mr. Newcomer's high standards of business ethics and personal integrity, as well as of his ability as an organizer.

On August 15, 1916, Mr. Newcomer was united in marriage to Miss Mary Stouffer, daughter of Frederick J. and Daisy (Bragunier) Stouffer, who were born in Hagerstown and have always made their home here. Mr. Newcomer is a republican, but he claims the right to maintain an independent course in politics, holding men and measures above loyalty to party. He is a member of the Christian church and fraternally belongs to the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. His interest in civic affairs and the commercial development of the community is sufficiently attested by his membership in the Hagerstown Country and Kiwanis Clubs and of the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce. With so promising a record to his credit Mr. Newcomer is rightly considered one of the future financial leaders of Hagerstown.

HON. CHARLES R. DISHAROON.

Charles R. Disharoon, leading lumber manufacturer, orchardist, and a democrat prominent in political and civic circles of Salisbury, Wicomico county, was born in Worcester county, Maryland, January 21, 1858, the son of William Thomas and Hettie Ann (Bailey) Disharoon. The father, who was born in 1826 and died in 1896, was a farmer until he retired from active life and was a consistent member of the Methodist Protestant church. Mr. Disharoon's paternal grandparents were Levin and Bettie (Davis) Disharoon, while his mother's father, L. Q. Bailey, was a large landowner and prominent farmer of Worcester county. The Disharpoons are of French descent, the name being a corruption of the original De-Sharon.

Charles R. Disharoon obtained his early education in the public schools of his native county and attended the Snow Hill high school from which he graduated in 1880, after having taught school himself from 1876 to 1878. After he left high school he had his first experience in the commercial world as a clerk in a store at New Hope, Maryland. In 1887 he engaged in the mercantile business on his own account at Powellville, which he continued for seven years, until he moved to Salisbury in 1894 and formed a connection with E. S. Adkins & Company, where he learned every phase of the lumber manufacturing industry. Mr. Disharoon established his own company, the C. R. Disharoon Company, manufacturers of wooden packages, in 1907, and has since directed its very profitable business. The output of the company, lumber, box shooks, crates, veneer packages and various kinds of fruit and vegetable baskets and crates, finds a ready sale close at hand in the great fruit and vegetable raising region of the Mid-Atlantic seaboard. Associated with Mr. Disharoon in the management of the manufacturing plants is his son, Walter R. Disharoon, who shares the work of personally supervising the work of the factory, for the firm believes that it is only by such close oversight of the work that a high standard of product is maintained. Ninety per cent of the lumber and logs used in its plant is cut from the stump and from this beginning down to the finished box or crate the best of materials and workmanship are employed to ensure the high quality of article that the company has always been able to guarantee. Mr. Disharoon has not confined himself to the lumber business exclusively, but has turned to other financial and commercial enterprises in Salisbury for an outlet for his capital and enterprise. He is president of the Peoples National Bank, a director in the Citizens Gas Company and the Salisbury Realty Company, and holds a similar post in the Wicomico Hotel Company, and the Wicomico Building & Loan Association.

For many years Mr. Disharoon has been high in the councils of the democratic party in his county and has gained a considerable reputation throughout the state because of his legislative activities. During the administration of Governor Harrington he was colonel on the gubernatorial staff. His first elective office was that of city councilman for Salisbury from 1898 to 1902, following which he served as mayor for four years. In 1906, 1912 and 1916 he was returned to the house of delegates in the state legislature and in 1920 was sent to Annapolis as senator from his county, which office he is now holding (1923). No better evidence of Mr. Disharoon's qualifications for positions of trust and great responsibility could be brought forward than the fact that he has for twenty-five years been repeatedly chosen by his fellow-citizens to represent them in governmental bodies and be their chief executive in local affairs. While he has been frankly allied with the democratic party because he sincerely believed its principles if properly applied to our government would bring the greatest good to the greatest numbers, Mr. Disharoon has never sacrificed the public good to party expediency and has always stood, in season and out of season, for clean politics, constructive measures and helpful service.

Mr. Disharoon is a Presbyterian and an elder in the church at Salisbury. He belongs to the local Rotary Club and fraternally is allied with the Masonic Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, Improved Order of Red Men and the Elks. He is the owner of one of the largest orchards in the great fruit growing region of the Eastern Shore, the chief features of which are fourteen thousand apple trees and two thousand peach trees. The orchard, which is located about three and a half miles from Salisbury is Mr. Disharoon's chief hobby and one of which he can be rightly proud.

On the 5th of March, 1884, Mr. Disharoon was united in marriage to Miss Cornelia Burbage, daughter of Samson and Margaret Burbage of Powellville. Mrs. Disharoon died April 21, 1919, at the age of fifty-eight. Mr. and Mrs. Disharoon had become the parents of three children: Chester C., born in 1884, who died in infancy; Ora Bell, born in 1886, who was married to Donald A. Hannaman in April, 1919, and died in December, 1921, leaving an infant daughter, Cornelia; and Walter Robbins, born in 1888. Mr. Disharoon was married on June 3, 1922, to Miss Mary B. Donaghay.

Walter Robbins Disharoon, the youngest child of Charles R. Disharoon, was born in Powellville, on the 4th of October, 1888. After completing his high school course he spent one year at Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland, following which he took a commercial course at the Goldey Business College of Wilmington, graduating in 1909. Returning to Salisbury, his boyhood home, Mr. Disharoon at once became associated with his father in the lumber business as vice president and treasurer of the C. R. Disharoon Lumber Company. He has also interested himself extensively in the fire insurance business as a member of the firm of Disharoon & Hodgson, and is a director in the Arcade Theatre Company and Pine Bluff Sanitarium, also the Eastern Shore Can Company. Naturally Mr. Disharoon has inherited democratic views in politics and a preference for the Presbyterian church, of which he is a member. He belongs to the Salisbury Rotary Club and is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. For sport and outdoor recreation Mr. Disharoon turns to baseball and is an enthusiastic "fan," loyally supporting our national game. Like his father he is interested personally in the great agricultural resources of his county and the Eastern Shore, investing in fine farm land as he has the opportunity to do so.

On March 4, 1916, Walter Robbins Disharoon was united in marriage to Miss Lydia Agatha Johnson, the daughter of Alexander M. and Margaret E. Johnson. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Disharoon: A daughter, Margaret Isabel, affectionately known as Peggy; and Charles Robbins (II), who bears the name of his grandfather.

LESLIE NINIAN COBLENTZ.

Leslie Ninian Coblentz is one of the younger attorneys of Frederick. He was born in Middletown, Frederick county, Maryland, on the 15th of September, 1895, and is the son of Calvin R. and Lizzie L. (Brandenburg) Coblentz. He is a member of one of the old and prominent families of the county which has been established in Middletown Valley since Revolutionary days. His father, a retired farmer, was born on the old Coblentz homestead in the Middletown district at the foot of the Catoctin mountain on the 3d of March, 1863, a son of Philip and Mary Ann (Kefauver) Coblentz, who were likewise natives of Frederick county, this state. The birthplace of Calvin R. Coblentz is on the tract known as "Farmers Delight"—a tract of one hundred and forty-four acres of excellent agricultural land which was the place of settlement of Herman Coblentz, the great-great-grandfather of Mr. Coblentz of this review, who emigrated from Germany to the United States in 1776. The property is now in possession of a representative of the sixth generation of the family in this country. Calvin R. Coblentz was reared on his father's farm and in his youthful days attended the schools of his native district. Like most of the members of the family, he turned his attention to the tilling of the soil and for thirty years devoted his time and energies to agricultural pursuits. His work was ever characterized by the most practical and progressive methods, so that he won a gratifying measure of success and is now living retired at Middletown, enjoying in well earned rest the fruits of his former toil. Farming, however, did not claim his attention to the exclusion of other interests. Since 1907 he has been a director of the Peoples Fire Insurance Company of Frederick county, which he aided in organizing in that year, and he is likewise a member of the board of directors of the Valley Savings Bank of Middletown, Frederick county, serving on the executive committee thereof at the present time.

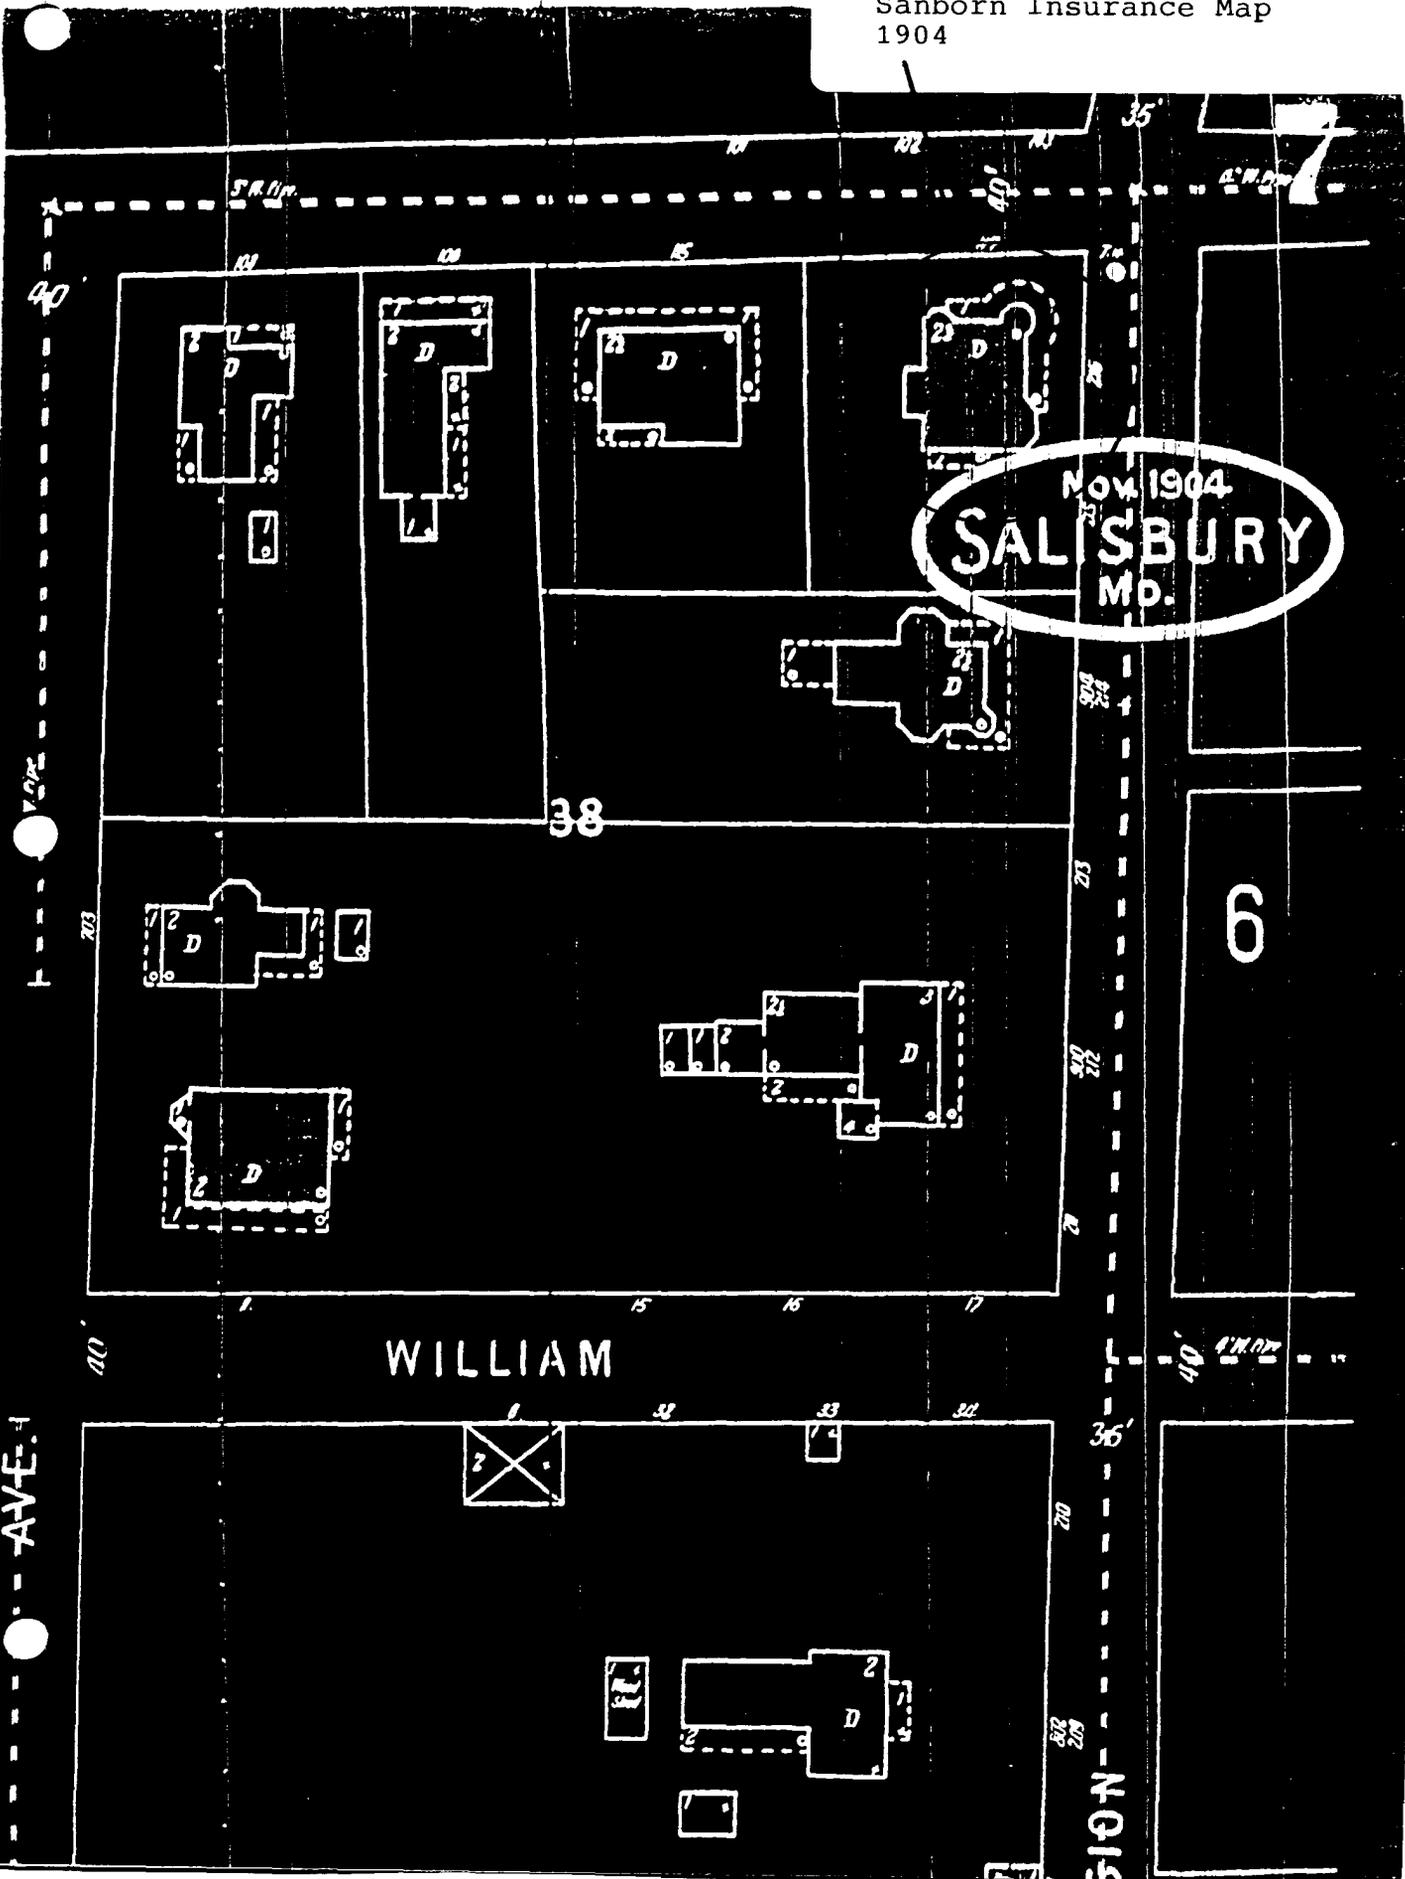

On the 12th of December, 1889, Mr. Coblentz was united in marriage to Miss Lizzie L. Brandenburg, daughter of Daniel and Lydia A. R. (Remsburg) Brandenburg. Mr. and Mrs. Coblentz have three children: Millard Calvin, who now owns and operates the original Coblentz farm; Leslie Ninian, of whom more extended mention is made below; and John Vernon, who is associated with the Peoples Fire Insurance Company of Maryland at Frederick. Politically Calvin R. Coblentz is an active supporter and stanch adherent of the democratic party and was twice a candidate for county commissioner of Frederick county but was not able to overcome the large normal republican majority. He has also served as secretary of the board of charity and has acted as school director and road supervisor of his district, while for two terms he served as a member of the board of commissioners of the town of Middletown. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in Christ Reformed church of Middletown, in which he has frequently served in an official capacity.

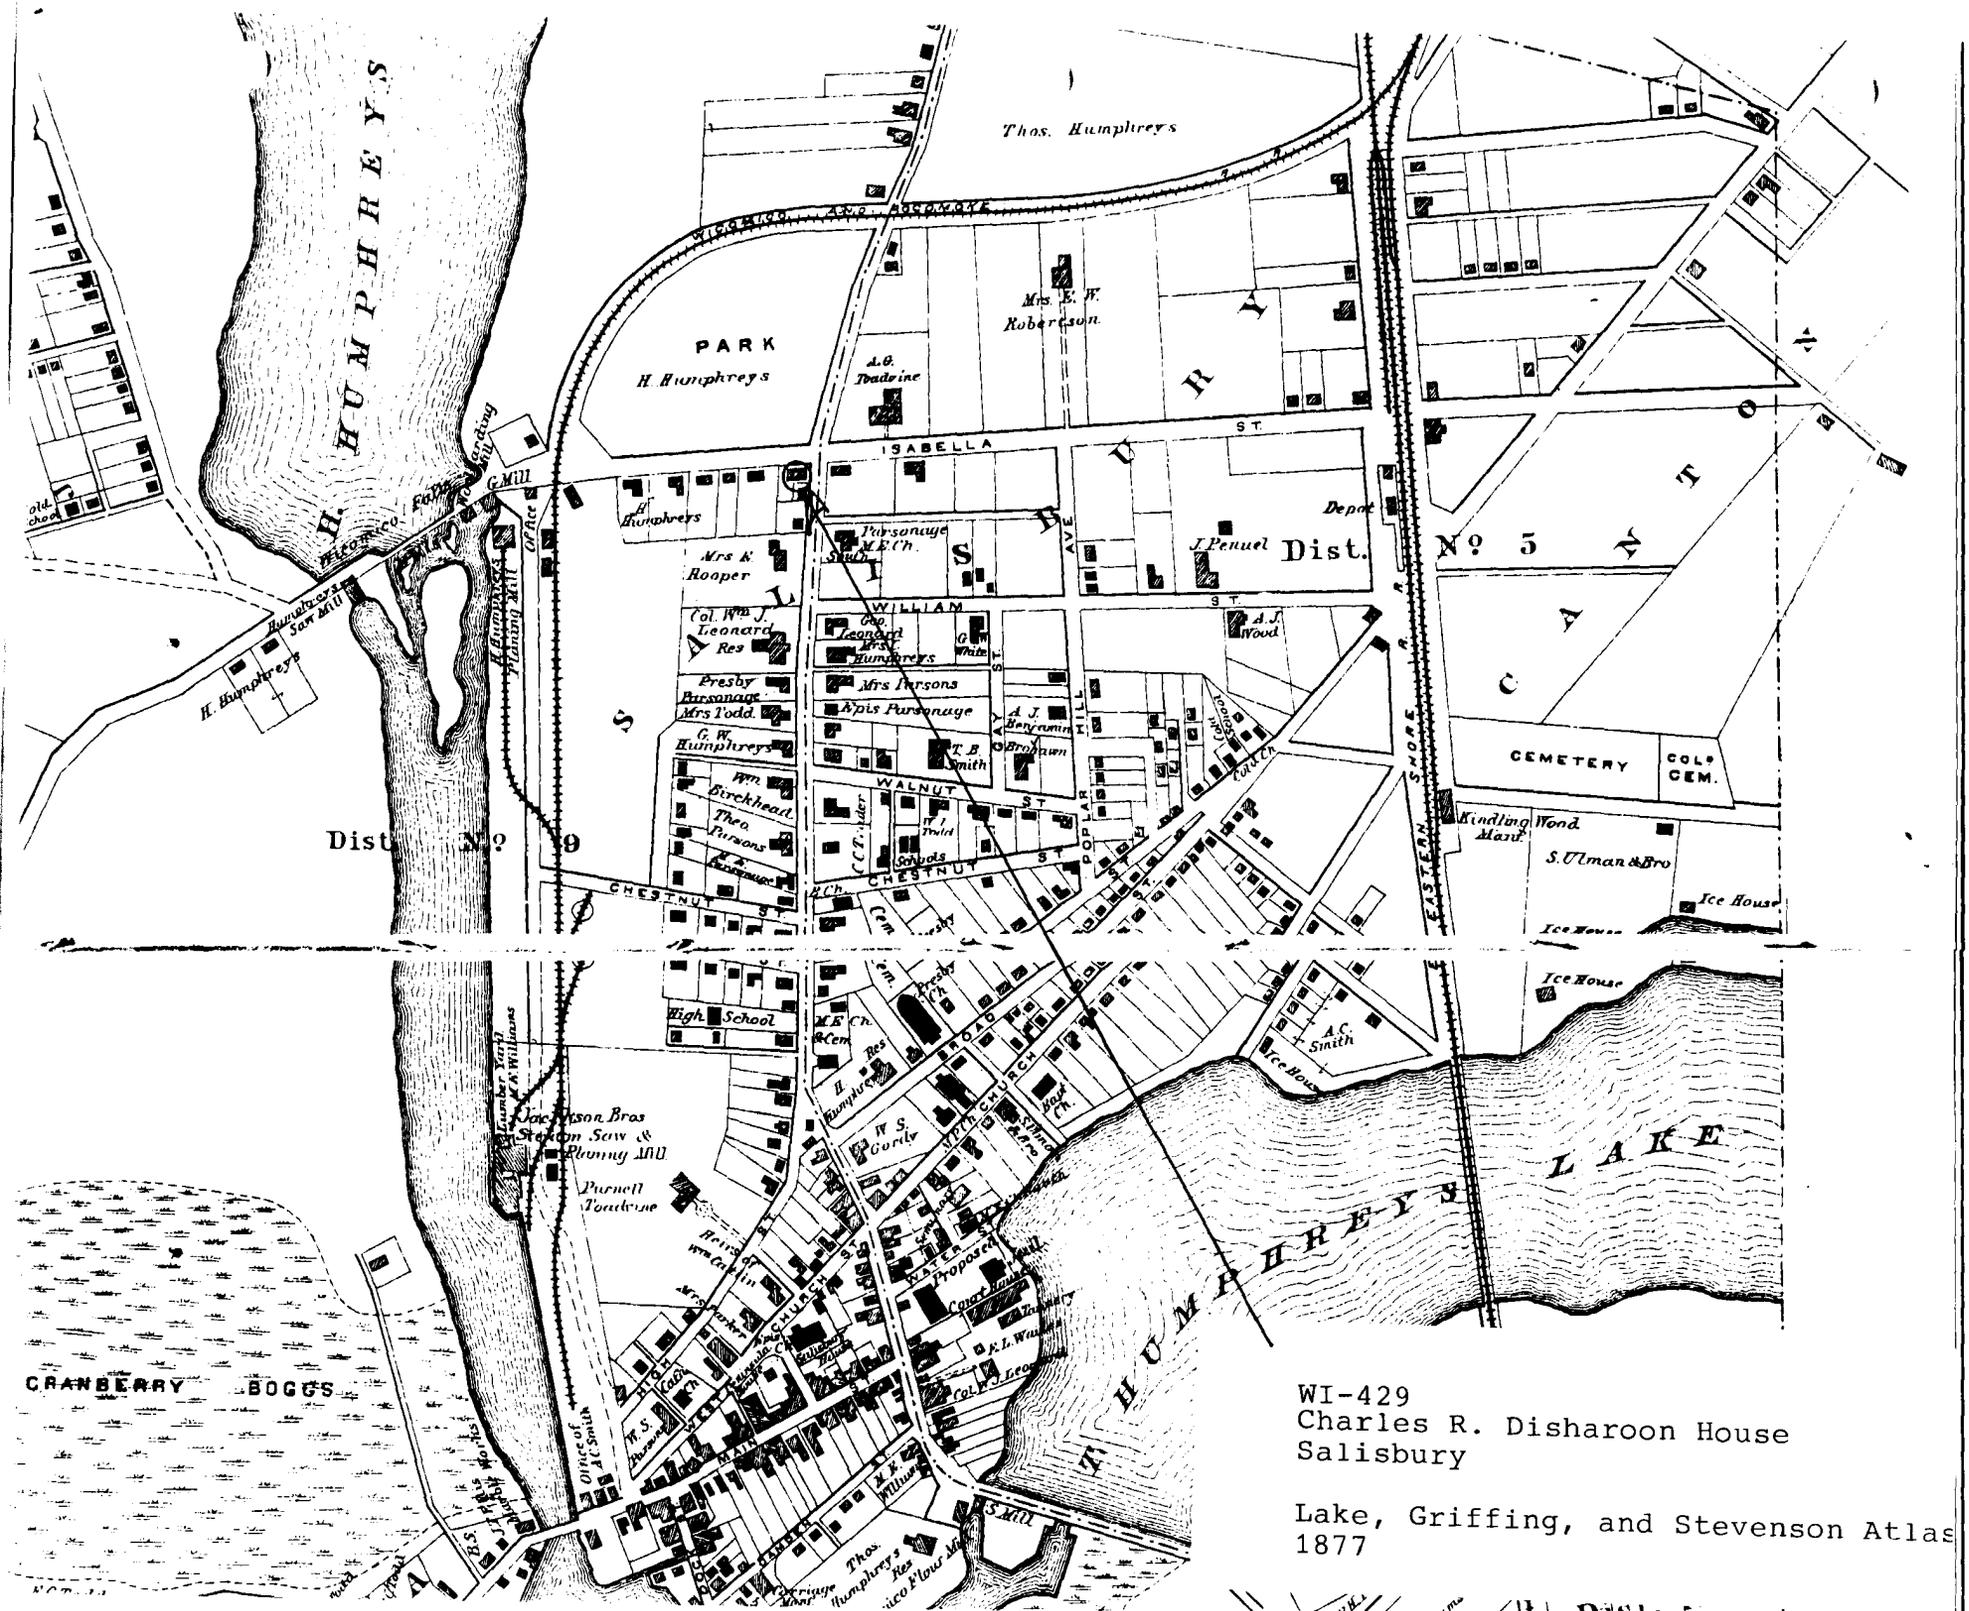

Leslie N. Coblentz received his early education in the public schools of Frederick county and graduated from the high school at Middletown in 1913. Four years later he was granted his Bachelor of Arts degree by Heidelberg University at Tiffin, Ohio. In the fall of 1919, after his return to civilian life following a period
