John Boznango House
Salisbury
Private

c. 1850

Historically identified in the land records as the John Boznango property, this story-and-a-half frame house appears to date from the third quarter of the nineteenth century, perhaps as early as 1850. The story-and-a-half form coupled with the flush gable end finish of the roof, suggest the pre-Civil War construction date. The chain of title research indicates that this lot was part of a much larger parcel known as the "Spencer Todd farm," which was subdivided into building lots around 1874. It is highly likely that this story-and-a-half frame house was repositioned to face Second Street when the lots were created from the Todd farm.

During the late nineteenth century the house and lot were held by Henrietta Byrd, who acquired the property in the wake of a circuit court case issued in 1874. During the first half of the twentieth century, the house and lot were owned by the Parsons family.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Identified as the John Boznango house, the story-and-a-half, one-room plan frame dwelling stands at 105 Second Street in the west side neighborhood of Salisbury, Wicomico County, Maryland. The house faces northwest with the gable roof oriented on a northeast/southwest axis. The house is currently unoccupied, and the exterior openings are covered with plywood boards.

Estimated to date around 1850-60, the story-and-a-half frame dwelling is supported on a brick pier foundation covered with pressed metal sheeting. Uniformly sheathed with asbestos shingles, the house is covered by a medium pitched asphalt shingle roof. Evident under the asbestos shingles is a layer of plain weatherboards. Attached to the south gable end is a single story addition with a low pitched gable roof.

The northwest (main) facade is a two-bay elevation defined by a door and a window opening. The window opening is boarded over. The base of the roof is finished with a boxed cornice.

The northeast gable end is defined by a single window opening on each floor, and the flush gable end is finished with a plain bargeboard.

The southwest gable end, on the other hand, is largely covered by the single-story, one-room plan wing. Above the roofline of the wing are small windows to either side of an interior end, stuccoed brick stove flue.

The interior was not seen.
