End of Dispute
Powellville
Private

c. 1860-70

The exact history of this three-part, stepped profile frame dwelling in Powellville is somewhat clouded by indistinct nineteenth-century land records, but the chain of title reveals that the house is located on a portion of a tract known as "End of Dispute." The three-part frame dwelling dates from the third quarter of the nineteenth century. Datable architectural features include circular sawn kerf marks on beams, mature cut nails, as well as late Greek Revival woodwork. The End of Dispute house is one of the few stepped profile dwellings to remain standing in southeastern Wicomico County, and its distinctive form adds to the historic appearance of Powellville.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The property known as End of Dispute is located at 35589 Mt. Herman Road in the village of Powellville, Wicomico County, Maryland. The two-story, three-part stepped profile frame dwelling faces northeast with the gable roof oriented on a northwest/southeast axis.

Built during the third quarter of the nineteenth century around 1860-70, the two-story, three-part frame dwelling is supported on a minimal brick foundation, and the exterior is clad with a layer of asbestos shingles. The three separate roofs are covered with asphalt shingles. Standing behind the house off its southeast corner is a story-and-a-half frame tenant house that was relocated to this site.

The northeast (main) elevation is a three-part facade with a full two-story, one-room plan section serving as the main block, while a story-and-a-half center section extends northward with a single-story one-room plan wing. Attached to the back of the single-story wing is a shed roofed kitchen. The two-story main block is defined by a single six-over-six sash window on each floor, and the base of the roof is finished with a boxed cornice. The southeast gable end is pierced by pairs of six-over-six sash windows. Finishing the edge of the roof is a boxed cornice with extended eaves and returns.

Attached to the northwest gable end of the main block is a story-and-a-half center section that is defined on its north side by a center door and flanking six-over-six sash windows. The half story above is not lighted by any windows on this side, however, two small single-pane windows pierce the gable end on either side of an interior end brick stove flue. The edges of the roof are finished with an extended eave with sloped soffits.

Extending from the northwest side of the center section is a single-story two-bay, one-room plan section that houses the dining room at present. A front door is flanked by a six-over-six sash window. The edges of the roof are finished like the center section with an extended eave and sloped soffits.

The interior is plainly finished with wide pine floors and third quarter of the nineteenth century woodwork. Floor joists are exposed in the single-story section and have circular sawn kerf marks. A boxed stair is located in the center section and provides access to the second floor rooms in the center section and main block. The stair is entered through a board-and-batten door.

The story-and-a-half building that stands in the backyard is a late nineteenth-century frame tenant house defined by a four-bay front including two center doors and flanking six-over-six sash windows. The first floor is sheltered by a hip roofed turned post porch. The half story is lighted by small two-over-two sash windows. Rising through the center of the tenant house is a single flue brick stack.
