Clara Gunby House
Fruitland
Private

c. 1841

The Clara Gunby house, located on North Division Street, is the oldest remaining structure in this crossroads community formerly known as Fork Town. The two-story, five-bay frame dwelling features second quarter of the nineteenth-century exterior finishes including nine-over-six sash windows and a ten-panel front door topped by an eight-pane transom. Solidly built exterior brick chimneys rise on each gable end to serve the center hall, single-pile plan dwelling. Construction of the house occurred around 1841 when John Gunby acquired several lots in Fork Town from other members of the family. The lots were part of "Morris's Conclusion," land which was bequeathed through Joshua Morris's will, probated in 1819. John Gunby is listed in the 1850 United States census for Worcester County as a 39-year old merchant with his wife Charlotte, 27; Clara, aged 11; and four younger children.

Clara Gunby is identified historically with the house since she is its most famous occupant. As she reached adulthood during the years leading up to the Civil War, Clara Gunby was an outspoken Southern sympathizer. When Federal troops occupied Salisbury, she was jailed for the defiance and disrespect she displayed towards the Union troops. Refusing to take the oath of allegiance to the Federal government, she was jailed and later transferred to Fort Monroe in Hampton Roads, Virginia. Later in the war she was used as part of a prisoner exchange with captured Union troops, and she resided in Richmond at the time of its siege. On April 2, 1865 she wrote about the arrival of the Federal troops in the capital of the Confederacy.

Negro soldiers enter screaming a camp meeting hymn & waving & brandishing their swords over their heads, long processions of the enemy. They hoist the flag over the capital, our hearts sink within us to see the hateful rag over our National Capital, moved some of my clothes to Mrs. P's, expecting the house to be burned, left my heart to perish with the house. John B [eale] comes to take my trunk & me to Dr. B., found the house on fire, hard work to put it out, carried water for three hours.

Following the war, Clara Gunby returned to the Eastern Shore and married William M. Huffington, who had worked diligently through the years for her release. The couple resided on a farm in the vicinity of Allen.

The house in Fork Town remained the residence of her mother following her father's death in 1868. A "Mrs. Gundy" is located at this site on the Lake, Griffing, and Stevenson atlas, published in 1877. Charlotte Somers Gunby died in 1884. After the Gunby's ownership, few alterations were made to the exterior other than the introduction of a cross gable on the roof and a turned porch Victorian porch across the front.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Clara Gunby house, also known as the John Kirk Gunby house, stands at 109 North Division Street in Fruitland, Wicomico County, Maryland. The two-and-a-half story, five-bay, center hall plan frame dwelling faces northwest with the gable roof oriented on a northeast/southwest axis.

Built around 1840, the two-story, five-bay, single-pile frame dwelling is supported on a continuous brick foundation, and the exterior is clad with asbestos shingles. The steeply pitched gable roof is covered with asphalt shingles. Attached to the back of the main block is a single story, one-room plan kitchen wing. The kitchen is covered with a gable roof, and the inside corner is infilled with a shed addition.

The northwest (main) façade is a five-bay elevation with a center entrance and flanking nine-over-six sash windows. Fixed in the entrance is a ten-panel door topped by an eight-pane transom. Each of the window and door openings is framed by a narrow beaded edge surround. Sheltering the center three bays is a Victorian turned post porch distinguished by a hip roof accented with a cross gable. Small decorative sawn drops are attached on the underside of the porch roof and are centered between the posts. The second floor is lighted by a series of five window openings, most of which retain their six-over-six sash. Centered on the roof is a Victorian cross gable pierced by a multi-paned window with colored glass corner panes. The edge of the cross gable has an extended eave and closed soffit. Otherwise, the base of the roof is finished with period boxed cornice dating from the 1840s.

The north and south gable ends are essentially alike with exterior, nine-course common bond brick stacks centered on each wall. The base of each stack is corbelled at grade level, and the shoulders are corbelled at the second story level. Each chimney stack is finished with a corbelled cap. Piercing the gable ends to each side of the chimney stacks are nine-over-six sash windows on the first floor and six-over-six sash windows on the second. The attic is lighted by four-over-two windows. Finishing the edge of the gable ends are period bargeboard moldings.

The southeast (rear) wall is covered partly by the single-story gable roofed frame kitchen wing, which is two bays across and one-room deep. A side door and window mark the southwest side. Filling the southeast corner of the rear wall is a single-story shed roofed section.

The interior was not seen.

MARYLAND HISTORY

EASTERN SHORE WOMAN DEFIED UNION ARMY

Clara Gunby: 'Death before submission'

• The Maryland Colonial Society sponsors an essay contest for students around the state who are interested in Maryland history. The following is this year's winning entry, as judged by Dr. Edward C. Papenfuse, state archivist.

By Paula F. Miller

During the Civil War, Maryland was divided between Union and Confederate supporters. Among Confederate advocates was Clara Gunby, a fiery Eastern Shore aristocrat with strong beliefs and determination. Clara started a diary when she was 14 and there recorded some fascinating events which illustrate her courage and commitment.

Clara, born in 1839, was the daughter of a Revolutionary hero, Col. John Gunby. Her family homestead was Forktown (presently known as Fruitland) in Somerset County. She attended boarding school in Salisbury and then Baltimore Female Academy, where she studied art. Through her school years Clara made occasional entries in her diary, a poignant account of her activities.

When the Civil War began in 1861, the country was torn apart. Maryland, a border state, was slow in committing itself. The Gunby family, however, actively supported the Confederacy. Clara's two brothers, Frank and John, enlisted in the Confederate Army. In her diary Clara notes that she engaged in preparing supplies to smuggle to the Confederate troops and during that time ran into trouble with Northern soldiers.

Yankee soldiers hung flags across the streets of Salisbury. When Clara refused to walk under them the Yankees, in retaliation, placed a Union flag over her door. Thereafter, Clara chose to enter and exit the house through windows. Clara was arrested in her home, sent to Baltimore and tried for treason.

After her trial she was placed in a room at the Washington Hotel in Baltimore and guarded constantly. For her release Clara needed only to take the Union loyalty oath, but she refused. Her fiance, William Huffington, desperately tried to get her freed. Her dedication to the South would not allow Clara to alter her position. She wrote, "Mr. Huffington came in this afternoon. Wants me to take the oath. Not I. Death before submission."

Eventually Clara was sent to Fortress Monroe, a federal prison in Virginia, and then exchanged for a federal officer. She arrived in Richmond on July 13, 1864, and was granted an interview with Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy. She gave him several valuable pieces of information aiding the Confederate cause. In gratitude President Davis provided employment for Clara and helped find her brothers.

Reunited with her brothers, Clara wrote, "Oh such a joy to find them both well." It is said Clara pulled down the drapes, had her brother lie down on the floor for a pattern, and cut out his shape to make clothes for him.

In April 1865, Clara was still in Virginia. She describes the fall of Richmond as "All completely in a state of demoralization, fire approaches, our terror, gets so near as we stand on the veranda. The heat scorches our foreheads . . . We found the house on fire, hard work to put it out, carried water for three hours." Clara stayed on the balcony late into the night watching the fire, her face almost blistered from the heat.

There is no record of any further wartime activities in her diary. After the war Clara returned home to marry William Huffington and lived a quiet life. The spirit of this noble yet little-known woman lives on through her paintings and poetry, now heirlooms in her family.

• Paula F. Miller, 17, is a 12th grader at Mardela High School in Wicomico County.

According to a letter dated 3/21/82 to Mrs. Hana from Paula F. Miller, this paper on Clara Gunby won first place in a state wide contest. The award was $100.00 + the ceremony was in Baltimore, Maryland on March 25, 1982.

Death of Mrs. Clara Huffington—A

Lady Passes Away

9/21/1839 - 10/2/1891

"Nothing can we call our own, but Death; And that small model of the barren earth, Which serves as paste and cover to our bones." —SHAKESPEARE.

Thursday evening last, as the sun was slowly sinking behind the Western horizon, and darkness was drawing down her sable robes, the life of Mrs. Clara Huffington slowly ebbed away, and her spirit borne on angels wings was carried up, up, beyond this 'vale of tears' to rest forever on the bosom of her God. Her's had been a checkered life, full of usefulness and goodness, and she needs no greater monument to perpetuate her memory than her exemplary life. Being naturally bright and witty she won for herself many kind and loving friends in her youthful days, whose friendship did not wane as the years grew old. Mrs. Huffington was born at Fruitland, this county, 51 years ago; she was educated at the Baltimore Female Academy, and left school full of honors.

In 1862, during the hottest of the war, Mrs. Huffington, then Miss Gunby, made up a parcel of clothing and other articles and hearing that her two brothers John and Frank Gunby were prisoners at Fort Delaware, determined to carry the parcel to them. On arriving at Fort Delaware she at once engaged the attention of the Com. Gen. Scheff, whose wife was a Maryland lady, and was taken in and entertained comfortably. Finding her brothers were not there, she through the influence of Mrs. Scheff, distributed the articles to some of the Confederate prisoners. She returned to Salisbury and was soon after arrested as a sympathizer of the South, taken to Baltimore and detained two weeks and then sent to Fortress Monroe, where she was placed in company with Mrs. Coker, a lady prisoner from South Carolina. Together with Mrs. Coker she was exchanged for a Northern prisoner and sent to Richmond, where she was introduced into the best society, through the influence of Col. Taylor and Calvert, who took a great interest in her from the fact that she was a descendant of Gen. Gunby, who covered the retreat of Washington on Long Island. She was a close friend to the family of President Davis and did some valuable work for the Confederacy.

She returned home and in 1865 began again the study of art in Baltimore city, under Prof. Keft. Her artistic career was a very successful one.

Mrs. Huffington leaves a husband and two children. She was a sister of Messrs. L. W. Gunby, Edward Gunby and S. S. Gunby of this city.

Her funeral services were held at Broad St. Presbyterian Church, Saturday morning, Rev. Mr. Reigart officiating.

1839 - 10/2/1891
Close of an Eventful Life

Mrs. Clara Gunby Huffington, wife of Wm. W. Huffington, died at her home in Salisbury last Thursday evening about 6 o'clock, of cancer. She had been taken from her home in Trappe district some weeks previous and brought to town where she could receive closer medical attention.

Mrs. Huffington was rather a remarkable woman and filled the measure of an eventful life. During the late war she was a strong sympathizer of the southern cause, and openly showed her sympathy by aiding relatives and friends fighting for the cause. She was once imprisoned by the federal government for disloyalty, at Richmond.

In 1865 she was married to Mr. Huffington of Trappe district. Shortly after her marriage she began the study of painting and made it a life-long work. Many of her productions she sold, but a collection valued by her at $2,000, is among her effects. She leaves a husband and two children, a son who is now assistant purser on one of the steamships plying between New York and Havana and a daughter who has been her constant attendant.

Two years ago she spent the winter in Philadelphia under treatment for cancer and returned in the spring, cured as she thought, but it soon proved otherwise.

She was a daughter of the late Mrs. Charlotte Gunby, and sister to Lewis W. Somers, and Edward, Gunby.

—Mr. Wm. W. Huffington, a highly respected citizen of this county died at home at Allen last Saturday, aged years. Funeral services were held in the M. A Woman With a History

Salisbury, Oct. 2.—Mrs. Clara Huffington, nee Gunby, died here to-night at 6 o'clock of cancer of the throat. Mrs. Huffington was a well-known artist, and for many years resided in Baltimore and contributed to the art galleries of that city. Her paintings are also favorably known in New York. The late A. T. Stewart gave several of her paintings very flattering notice.

She was a leader here in the Southern cause, and in 1862 was arrested for refusing to walk under the Union flag and taken to Fortress Monroe, where she was exchanged and sent to Richmond, where she served as a for the Southern Confederacy. She was well-known to the late Jeff Davis and other Southerners.

Mrs. Huffington was one of the brightest lights of the state, and a complete history could be written on her life. She was a sister of L. W. Gunby, the hardware dealer of this city. Among her estate are several very valuable paintings, the best one being "Pharaoh's Horses" and the "Petition to the Dodge," each valued at $500.
