The Grace T. Trader Farm consists of a detached, single-family dwelling and a shed outbuilding. The property is located on the north side of Carey Road, approximately .4 miles west of US 113. The two-and-one-half-story, front-gabled dwelling, likely constructed in the 1910s or 1920s, features a symmetrical south facade with three bays. The balloon frame structure is covered with aluminum siding and exhibits a gable roof clad with composition asphalt shingles. The foundation is mostly brick, with some concrete block at the rear of the house.

The facade and east side are noted by a one-story, hip-roofed, wrap-around porch that has been screened and partially covered with wood lattice. The northeast portion of the porch has been infilled and converted to living space. A large, two-story, gabled wing extends from the rear (north) side of the house, and a small shed addition is attached to the west side of the wing. The modern one-over-one, double-hung sash windows are both single and paired and are set in plain wood surrounds. Entrance to the house is made via a single-leaf door in the infilled portion of the wrap-around porch on the house's east side. A door may have been located in the south facade at one time, as evidenced by a screen door at that location in the wrap-around porch; currently, however, the facade contains only windows. A large brick interior chimney protrudes from the west slope of the roof, while a small brick ridge chimney is situated near the rear of the main block.

West/northwest of the dwelling is a small gabled shed with board and batten siding, a corrugated metal roof, and an opening in the east side. The outbuilding appears to be contemporaneous with the dwelling. A dirt loop drive provides access to and from Carey Road, and the property features a small yard, a number of large trees, and open cropland and forest to the north, east, and west.

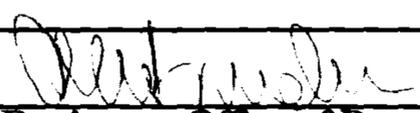

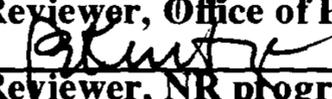

Alterations to the dwelling include the aluminum siding, the modern screening and wood lattice on the wrap-around porch, the infill within the porch, the rear additions, the modern windows, and the possible removal of a south facade door. It is assumed that the property historically contained additional outbuildings that no longer survive.

The Grace T. Trader Farm is a representative example of a vernacular farmstead that dates to the early decades of the twentieth century. It serves to illustrate the development of farmsteads in this century in an agricultural area mostly developed during the nineteenth century. The Grace T. Trader Farm developed during an era in which truck farming was replacing older agricultural models and new fruit and vegetable crops were on the rise in Worcester County (Touart 1994:165-167; Truitt and Les Callette 1977:249, 253-255). The farmhouse, shed, and surrounding cropland and forest retain the setting and feeling of the historic period.

The farmhouse was likely constructed in the 1910s or 1920s, based on physical inspection. Research of deed records has proven inconclusive, as one or two different owners may have constructed the buildings. Using the periods from the Maryland Comprehensive Historic Preservation Plan Data, this would place the farmstead at the end of the Industrial/Urban Dominance period (A.D. 1870-1930). The current legal tax parcel containing the farmhouse and shed encompasses 105.21 acres.

The Grace T. Trader Farm is recommended ineligible for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places in accordance with the criteria of eligibility in 36 CFR 60.4. Its integrity of design, materials, workmanship, and feeling has been compromised due to alterations. It has no known associations with significant historical events (Criterion A) or persons (Criterion B), it is not significant for its architectural style or design characteristics (Criterion C), and further research of it would not appear to yield information important in prehistory or history (Criterion D).
